FIELDS SERVED BY D and W

The publication in which shipper, carrier, receiver, warehouseman and equipment manufacturer meet on common ground to obtain and exchange ideas and suggestions for more efficient and economical distribution of raw materials and finished products. D and W is a clearing house of information for all who are interested in:

SHIPPING . . . . by air, highway, rail and water, of raw materials and finished products of all kinds, from points of origin to points of ultimate destination. D and W insists that efficiency and economy are as imperative in transportation of commodities as in manufacturing and selling.

HANDLING . . . of raw materials and finished products, in bulk, in packages, and in palletized units, for and during production, transportation, storage and distribution. D and W submits that handling costs are a vital factor in determining profits.

WAREHOUSING . of raw materials, finished products and miscellaneous supplies for any or all of the following reasons: as collateral for loans; to anticipate seasonal buying; to obtain lower rates by making bulk rather than l.c.l shipments; to have spot stocks readily available at important market centers; as an aid in developing new markets. D and W maintains that, for efficient and economical distribution, intelligent and practical warehousing is indispensable.

DISTRIBUTION . . of anything anywhere from points of origin and production to points of ultimate use and consumption whether sectional, national or international. D and W takes the position that more efficient and economical distribution is the present major problem of modern business.

SOME ADVANCED IDEAS ON

. . . ON YOUR OWN PREMISES
. . . ANYWHERE !

It's far ahead in the whirling world of today . . . the "Tidewater Method" of Field Warehousing.

Here you have a plan which "brings the warehouse to the goods" . . . a plan which overcomes today's storage problems, and also eases the special financing difficulties of the times.

You will find exceedingly helpful the "Tidewater Method" of furnishing you with warehouse receipts for inventories of raw materials or finished goods against which you can borrow—from your local bank—usually at low, secured loan rates. No expensive shipping, storage, or handling costs.

Storage, bonding, custodianship, withdrawals, records . . . everything is covered in the new "Tidewater Method."

Wouldn't you like to hear the whole story of this advanced method of Field Warehousing? Just drop us a postcard or letter—TODAY!

Standards in Distribution

IT has been stated on this page that "no basic standards have ever been established in distribution in any way comparable with production standards." We have been asked to outline some of the things that might be helpful in this connection. We suggest the following:

1. Development of a simple, standard cost accounting system that will show the cost factors in distribution more clearly and comprehensively.
2. Simplification of freight rates by all carriers.
3. Adoption of uniform state laws for the regulation of highway traffic, the size and weight of vehicles, and the taxes and fees to be levied thereon.
4. Establishment of standard operational dimension points and load capacity factors for materials handling equipment.
5. Adoption of uniform bills of lading, waybills, vouchers, receipts, credit slips, statements, bills and other necessary commercial forms and papers.
6. The use in international trade of a single system of weights and measures, preferably the metric system.
7. Development of uniform standards for the compilation of basic economic statistics.
8. Establishment of an international bureau of standards.
9. Organization in this country of a National Institute of Distribution to further the ends enumerated above, and to develop ways and means of making distribution, in all of its ramifications, more efficient and economical. As we have stated before, we believe such an organization should be founded and supported by national industrial and mercantile associations, collectively, for purposes of education, research, cost studies, planning, industrial coordination, legislation, etc., not merely for the benefit of separate groups but for all industries, because distribution concerns and affects all.

We hope that nobody will infer from what has been stated or implied that we are advocating regimentation. Regimentation is the making of many into the likeness of one; it is a modern synonym for tyranny; it is the degradation of the individual to the status of a state slave by means of force and trickery. Standardization, on the other hand, in the sense that we mean it, is the formulation of an established measure of extent, quantity, quality or value.

Standardization for utilitarian purposes and for the common good is necessary in any organized society. We have only to look about us to see that this is so.

Moreover, standardization is consistent both with nature's processes and with human logic. Nature has many standards. Innumerable varieties of living creatures and organisms inhabit this whirling, sea-girt world, but each conforms to a norm or standard of its own.

While men differ in temperaments, tastes and talents, the anatomy of men is similar. Structurally, man is a standardized product. There are large, medium and small sizes, but the frame, the circulatory system and the organic functions of normal men are fundamentally alike. So are their bodily needs, which, today, to a greater extent than ever, are dependent upon the proper functioning of an efficient system of distribution.

In every age, men have developed and accepted standards of various kinds in diversified spheres of human activity. Among some of the more conspicuous examples that come to mind are: standard time zones; rules for sports and games; legal codes; moral standards; uniform rules for the orderly transaction of business in courts and assemblies; monetary standards; legal weights and measures; tracks of standard gage for railroads; the universal gear shift in the automotive field; scientific identification and standardization of colors; finger prints in criminal investigations, etc., ad infinitum.

If we have the courage, the intelligence and the foresight to develop and accept standardization of methods and practices for better distribution it may be possible to make distribution more efficient, economical and equable. The accomplishment of that will benefit everybody, everywhere. It will take a lot of doing, but until it has been done, on a broad scale, we do not believe that any sound and lasting prosperity will be possible for anybody, anywhere.

Practical Probabilities

SPEAKING on some of the practical probabilities likely to confront business after the war, J. N. Bauman, vice president, The White Motor Co., told a group of sales executives recently that "since we are likely to be in a highly competitive era, we must recognize the fact that it will be a period of low profit margins. Good volume will be necessary for satisfactory profits and we can never have maximum volume without low cost production and distribution.

"Every factor that enters into the cost, and, therefore, the price, of a product," Mr. Bauman said, "will be subject to closer scrutiny than ever. For that reason the economy of distribution looms as more important than ever before.

"The estimate is made on good authority," Mr. Bauman stated, "that 58c. of the consumer's average dollar goes for distribution and only 42c. for production." This means, in his opinion, that manufacturing economies have gone about as far as they can, and that "the best hope of significant cost reductions in the future lies in our ability to find more economical distribution methods.

"The problem calls for bringing an entirely new point of view to the selling phase of business. It calls for recognizing that better sales and distribution methods can help to level off the ruinous peaks and valleys of production and employment, if we plan thoroughly and set up machinery to give them that chance."

Facts and Prospects In Merchandise Warehousing

Members of FEWA during the Government's past fiscal year have handled in excess of 18,000 carloads of war and lend-lease supplies, in addition to the immense tonnage of dry foods stored by the WFA. The transportation and storage of this volume of freight have been modern miracles. Warehousemen are likely to be handicapped for some time to come by manpower shortages. Generally speaking merchandise warehouses will be very busy all through 1945 and probably for a couple of years beyond that.

By SAMUEL G. SPEAR
Director of Storage
Office of Defense Transportation

THE year 1944 has been a memorable one in the merchandise warehouse industry. A tremendous job has been performed and, with few exceptions, performed splendidly. A great volume of freight has been handled very largely directly for Government or for firms having Government contracts, all contributing to the war effort of furnishing our fighting men or our Allies with guns, trucks, tanks, ships and food.

This heavy load has been handled despite labor shortages and inefficient help, inability to secure mechanical equipment, requirements for faster and heavier loading of cars, increased demurrage charges and heavy overtime wage payments.

Over 10,000,000 Sq. Ft.

As one of its important activities even for a considerable period before Pearl Harbor, under the National Defense Advisory Commissioner of Transportation, the Storage Division, now a part of the Office of Defense Transportation, was engaged in encouraging the use of public warehousing by Government procurement agencies and this work has been kept up ever since. The War and Navy Departments and other procurement agencies were promised a minimum of 10,000,000 sq. ft. of public warehouse space at good transit points in safe warehouses with experienced management. This and much more has been furnished by the warehouse industry. The campaign was carried on because the use of public warehouses was deemed important to the furtherance of war transportation for reasons of economy and efficiency. This work has borne fruit in the past year when the public merchandise warehouses have handled more Government freight for more agencies than ever before.

The formation of Federal Emergency Warehouse Assns. in 34 of the principal transit cities of the country, with their pledge of space for Government storage and their expansion through operation of buildings leased by the Government, was the greatest single influence in overcoming resistance to use of public warehouses, particularly by the armed services. The warehouse members of the FEWA during the Government's past fiscal year have handled 18,000 carloads of war and lend-lease supplies in addition to the immense tonnage of dry foods stored by the War Food Administration for its foreign and domestic programs.

Proud of Carriers

During the past two years the procurement of storage has largely been for raw materials and finished products, all as a part of the task of supplying our armed forces at home and abroad, as well as Russia, Great Britain and our other Allies, and for subsistence for the fighting forces and civilian populations.

The transportation and incidental storage of a considerable portion of this great volume of freight have been modern miracles which have confounded our enemies and amazed our own people.

The ODT is proud of the performance of our railroads, trucks, water and air lines and is also gratified at the performance of the public warehouses which has prevented freight cars from being used for storage by prompt unloading of freight that could not be forwarded immediately to its ultimate destination.

Naturally the greatest storage problems have arisen at the great ports of embarkation on the North Atlantic Coast. To have enough goods in store at these ports for emergencies caused by changing of arrival dates of ships, or in allocation of different classes of cargo, and yet keep the warehouses fluid so that freight cars could always be relieved of their freight, has been a matter of delicate balance requiring controls which the experience of the previous great war showed to be necessary.

After V-E Day

This condition on the Atlantic Coast will continue until Germany is defeated. There will probably be sudden cessation at that time of the overseas shipment of ammunition, tanks and other combat materiel. How much of this type of freight which is rolling at the time of a surrender will have to be cared for by public warehousemen is anybody's guess, but we can be sure that whenever there is a disturbance of shipping schedules, there will be warehousing needed. The requirements of subsistence after V-E Day, however, would appear to be as great or greater than ever.

Meanwhile, as shipping can be released, our commercial export and import trade will grow and port warehouses will again be used for the type of storage for which they were constructed. Commercial freight will probably be available to fill the space now occupied by war goods when the tide of war traffic shifts westward.

My guess is that the warehouses on the North Atlantic Seaboard will be used to near capacity for a considerable time after the termination of the first phase of the war even with the use of interior transit points for storage of exports and imports, including returned material.

As to the territory west of the Mississippi River, there is no doubt that all facilities will be taxed to the utmost so long as Japan remains unconquered.

Throughout the rest of the country, with present food production schedules, it is hard to see much empty space in any good warehouse strategically located in the line of transportation.

Surplus Materials

Much consideration is being given to the storage of machinery and materials (raw, semi-fabricated and fabricated) resulting from cancelled contracts. While this has not yet run into excessive tonnages, provisions are having to be made for the probable flood of such material after the termination of the European phase of the war. While public merchandise warehouses would not have room, nor would they be suitable for much of this type of storage, warehouse industry representatives are to be found on all regional sub-committees of the Space Control Committee Surplus War Property Administration. The experience of public warehousemen is apt to be called upon to a large extent in the protection and storage of surplus materials pending redistribution.

It appears that warehousemen will be handicapped at least until V-E Day by manpower shortages and will have to continue to employ every type of labor possible, including part-time, handicapped, female, prisoner-of-war, or others not customarily used in warehouse operation. Constant collaboration with local manpower priority committees and United States Employment Service offices is necessary. Working around the clock as well as Saturdays, Sundays and holidays, when necessary for prompt unloading of freight cars or filling call-forward orders to meet convoy requirements, must continue to be resorted to. The costs will not be covered by warehouse handling ceiling rates no doubt, but more than normal warehouse occupancy should take up the slack.

Busy Year Foreseen

It is my belief that, generally speaking, the merchandise warehouses will be very busy all during 1945 and probably for a couple of years beyond that. There will be regional shifts caused by changing of war theatres which may bring into greater use warehouse locations relatively neglected heretofore. A desirable result may be lightening of the storage load in areas where warehouse facilities are now overtaxed.

With two wars yet to be won, warehousemen should make every effort to take care of Government storage. Civilian needs must be cared for too, but the flow of goods to the fighting forces should have top priority. A let-down at this time may mean added months of war and thousands of lives wasted.

If warehousemen have problems in their dealings with Government agencies, it may be they can save a trip to Washington, thus making room for some furloughed soldier or sailor, by first taking the matter up by correspondence with the Storage Division of the ODT.

The merchandise warehouse industry is fortunate in having a trade association office in Washington with which the Storage Division of ODT keeps in close touch.

Are Warehousemen Sales Minded?

The author finds the answer definitely in the affirmative. Through a recent survey he has discovered that warehousemen realize that these war years are building up sales problems for the future. They realize they will have to overcome resistances built up between them and prospects during this period when it has been necessary for many warehouses to turn away desirable accounts. The answer, however, is that they can and will overcome these difficulties and, from all indications, will develop broader service and new types of business.

By JOHN H. FREDERICK

Professor of Transportation and Industry, School of Business Administration, The University of Texas

o o o

LAST summer a manufacturer of considerable importance and one who long before then should have known about what public warehousing could do for him said to the writer:

"So far as I can recall, no public warehouseman has ever tried to sell me constructively; that is, showing where his services fit into my distribution picture."

Before our conversation was over this man had an answer, but this again brought home the fact that the public warehousemen of the country have long been thought of as poor salesmen.

This probably is true as far as the industry as a whole is concerned, but there certainly are individual warehousemen who have done and are doing a good selling job. On the other hand, as in other service businesses, there are warehousemen who lack sales ability or sales-mindedness, even though they are good warehousemen and know what good warehousing service is, and give it.

In the course of an investigation undertaken after the conversation above mentioned it was discovered that warehousemen were not such poor salesmen as some believe. On the contrary, they have gone out after accounts and have kept them sold. Indeed, such sales procedure appears to be part of the day-to-day operations of enterprising public warehousemen even though their chief selling job during the past three years has not been to obtain new accounts, as many of these have come in automatically, so to speak, but has been to "sell" the accounts already in warehouses on paying an adequate rate for what they demand, and get, in the way of service.

Two Sales Aspects

Selling warehouse services has two aspects: (1) Selling the idea of public merchandise warehouse service to a distributor who may not be familiar with it. (2) Selling a particular warehouseman's service and facilities to a distributor who uses public merchandise warehouses.

The first problem, selling a prospect who has never used public merchandise warehouse services before, involves many things. The establishment of warehouse stocks may be a radical departure from a former method of distribution and the prospect usually has perfectly natural human inertia: he does not want to make a change. It sometimes takes a lot of constructive selling, to convince such a prospect that distribution through general merchandise warehouses, though new to him, is a well-established method for the movement of goods, used by thousands of distributors, and that it has a value for him.

The warehouseman has to sell such a prospect on the idea that spot stocks in general merchandise warehouses reduce sales resistance from his buyers by providing speedier delivery; that he can save freight charges by making carload shipments to warehouses; that warehouse paper work and record keeping is a simple matter, not the "bug-a-boo" that so many imagine.

The problem of selling a particular warehouseman's service may be divided into two parts:

A. Where the prospect is using warehouses generally and already has a stock in another warehouse than the one wanting his account. Business ethics have become fairly well established in the warehousing industry and the better warehousemen do not solicit storers to leave a competitor's building. Occasionally, an account storing in a warehouse in a city voluntarily approaches another warehouse in the same city. It is generally the custom for the warehouseman so approached to try to find out why a change is desired. If the client is looking for a cheaper rate and nothing else the better warehousemen pass up such chances to get new clients. If the client is looking for better service the warehouseman will analyze the account carefully and show what can be done. Usually such a client will be willing to pay a little more to obtain uniformly satisfactory, day-by-day service.

B. Where the prospect is using warehouses elsewhere, but not in a particular warehouseman's city. On such prospects the warehouseman seeking the business must first become a salesman for his trade territory and for his city. The prospect wants to know what kind of a market there is for his products among customers who can be served from a particular warehouse. In this, he is influenced by population figures, freight rates, delivery schedules and buying habits in an area. The warehouseman must assemble these facts and interpret them as they apply to a prospect's products. If a warehouseman can convince a prospect that his warehouse serves an area in which he can profitably sell, other things, such as storage rates and other charges, are usually easy to arrange.

Knowledge of Costs Vital

There are a number of factors preventing warehousemen from being as good salesmen as they would perhaps like to be. These are:

1. Warehousemen do not always know their true costs of performance. To know costs is important in selling any service.

2. The warehouseman is more often sold by the distributor rather than selling his service to his clients for what it is worth.

3. When a warehouseman sells his services for less than what they are worth his income does not permit him to engage in sales research and promotional activities. He necessarily limits his efforts solely to storage and handling of accounts that gravitate his way.

The sales-minded warehouseman makes a definite study of his costs and so knows exactly what rates are applicable to his services. Such warehousemen are able to do constructive selling such as in the following examples of actual cases:

A. A small manufacturer was sold on the advantages of terminating a lease on a substantial block of space which had been used for the combined purposes of manufacturing, storage, shipping room and office. Under the arrangement in the warehouse a minimum amount of manufacturing space was leased to this client at a fixed rental and additional storage space as required was furnished on a month-to-month basis. This gave the client the benefit of maximum flexibility and the utmost economy of operation. Shipping space was no longer necessary as the warehouse arranged to do all shipping and receiving. The client reduced operating costs; avoided unnecessary detail work as the warehouse acted both as landlord and shipping agent; obtained the benefit of railroad siding location which the client had not had at his previous location; and gained the advantages of daily express and motor truck pick-up service which went to the warehouse as a matter of course.

The sales technique here consisted in pointing out the elasticity of public warehouse space compared with permanent leased space under private warehousing set-ups.

B. This prospect was "sold" on the idea of taking advantage of low water transportation rates prior to the closing of a navigation season thereby building up an inventory of stock in a warehouse at a strategic location in a profitable market. The savings realized on transportation costs contributed generously to the cost of storage and handling over a period of months. The client, through this arrangement developed by a warehouseman, was enabled to release valuable manufacturing space previously used for storage. They were thus able to maintain volume production and at the same time provide immediate and quick delivery to their trade from the warehoused stock.

C. A prospect, pressed for cash, was "sold" the idea of using a public merchandise warehouse because of the advantages gained by employing negotiable public warehouse receipts, representing the stored merchandise, as collateral in obtaining funds needed in the operation of his business. This client also realized the advantages of placing products in desirable distribution areas thus improving delivery and increasing sales because stocks were always on hand for delivery on short notice.

D. A warehouse leased space on a landlord-tenant basis to an account because it attracted to the warehouse, for storage, certain merchandise that could be delivered on flat trucks from the warehouse. Eventually this client wanted to lease more space than the warehouse felt it could give him. When refused the tenant threatened to move. The warehouseman then did a real selling job and convinced the client that he should store surplus inventory in public warehouse space during the peak season. This provided additional storage revenue and gave the tenant the space needed at a lower cost per year than if he had rented additional space.

No Sales Formula

There is no sales formula used by public warehousemen. Their services are flexible and fitted to customers' needs. Often a client is attracted because the warehouse can provide facilities impossible or too costly for the client to provide for himself, such as cool rooms, fumigating chambers, facilities for storage in transit, control of humidity and temperature. Again, the sales presentation can be built around the fact that in the event of fires, floods, or strikes in the manufacturing area, stocks carried in public warehouses located at strategic marketing centers will not be affected so that customers will continue to be served without interruption. At other times all a warehouseman need do to gain a client is to emphasize the fact that a warehoused stock is better than consigned stocks because one stock will serve many outlets with full control of the merchandise in storer's hands at all times.

A Noteworthy Program

Here is how one nationally known warehouseman handles an account:

"When we receive an inquiry concerning our services, for instance through the telephone, we furnish as much information as possible to our prospect, and then follow through by letter, and one of our brochures. If he desires rates and gives us sufficient information, we present our rate quotation in duplicate, asking him to sign and return the duplicate copy to us for our files if the proposition meets with his approval. If the account is local, one of our representatives calls on the prospect to answer questions and be of service to him. These salesmen are fully qualified to ascertain the needs of the manufacturer or distributor and then make further recommendations. After this conference, further confirmation of the visit is forwarded and if rates were not given and confirmed at the time of letter following the telephone conversation, such is taken care of then.

"Inquiries from out of town are handled by correspondence practically in the same manner, that is we give the prospect a full outline of our facilities, find out what he desires, the dimensions, measurements, weight, and extra services, etc., in order to furnish him with a complete and fair proposal. If the account is large enough, one of our men will call on the prospect in order to satisfy him as to our competence and what we have to offer.

"There are several chains of warehouses to which we belong, which give us representation throughout the country. When an account in the west wants to distribute and warehouse in the east, he contacts his local warehouseman. If he is a member of one of our chains, he will recommend us, furnishing us with as much information as possible. If there is any difficulty or misunderstanding one chain member will endeavor to correct the

No Warehouse Conventions

ALL three warehouse conventions, originally scheduled for February, have been postponed. This includes the American Warehousemen's Assn. convention which was to have been held Feb. 16 to 18 at Chicago; meeting of the National Furniture Warehousemen's Assn., Feb. 19 to 24, also in Chicago, and meeting of the Mayflower Warehousemen's Assn. which was to have been held at Detroit, Feb. 21 to 24.

According to present plans, all three associations will hold meetings in the spring or summer, if conditions then warrant such action.

However, reports from Washington indicate the possibility that a Government directive will be issued placing a ban for the rest of the year on national conventions involving railroad travel.

What's in Store for Storage?

An appraisal of some of the current major trends likely to affect distribution and warehousing after the war indicates that the warehouse industry must undertake more vigorous and intelligent selling of the fundamental principle that the proper use of modern public storage facilities is vital for more efficient and economical distribution.

By CLYDE E. PHELPS
Executive Secretary
Associated Warehouses, Inc.

EVERYWHERE people are beginning to recognize the fact that this country and the world are in the midst of a social and economic revolution. All over the world people's concepts of government and their national and international responsibilities to one another have changed.

The last World War started us thinking in terms of world unity, and the present war has crystalized the opinion of the American people and other peoples that we are 'one world' and our relation with each other must be on the basis of the greatest good for the world. The American people are now taking the lead in this social trend by demanding world peace, world trade, and social security. They have stated in no uncertain terms that they believe this can be accomplished.

Two Salient Points

How does this new world-wide social trend affect our thinking and our actions in the field of distribution and storage?

First of all, distribution is no longer a domestic problem but an international one. As Dr. Lionel D. Edie, noted economist says, "We must see and think internationally." Already the people of the United States are beginning to think in these terms, and the future plans of our industry must be made accordingly.

Secondly, we must recognize in our thinking on postwar distribution that government is likely to assume a new and important role in the field of distribution, as well as in business generally. This is the inevitable result of social and economic changes. It seems likely that we must learn to regard government as the art of world regulation for future peace and social security. If we appreciate this fact in its full importance, we, as businessmen, must take a more active part in government and place government on a higher plane.

With these two salient premises established in our thinking, we can see the important part our industry has to play in world affairs. The proper distribution of goods to all peoples is the keynote to the future peace and prosperity of the world. During the transition period, our industry must absorb the shocks of readjusting distribution to peacetime economy. Then we must carry on to new and higher levels of efficient postwar distribution.

Various business and government leaders have recognized and attached the greatest importance to distribution as the number one problem in the postwar years. Eric A. Johnston, president U. S. Chamber of Commerce, gave a major address, entitled —"Distribution—A Key to Prosperity"—at the Chamber of Commerce conference held last October. Dr. Virgil Reed, director of statistics, War Production Board has stated, "To win the war through production and lose the peace through distribution would be America's greatest tragedy."

To achieve peace and security in the years ahead, the number one problem to be solved is effective distribution on a worldwide basis. It is up to industry to preach this fundamental theory of economics. Further, we must act now to build a more efficient and equitable distribution system on an international basis. It is our only hope of obtaining permanent peace and prosperity for our industry, for our country, and for the world.

The DandW Proposal

Already the distribution industry has done some forceful thinking on this subject. The importance of this problem was recognized by DandW in a recent editorial, "Basic Needs for Better Distribution," appearing in its Aug., 1944, issue. The management and editorial staff of DandW set forth in that editorial one of the clearest statements yet made on this subject. Three basic principles upon which our industry can think out this problem and build a future program of action are outlined.

Let us consider the three features of DandW's proposal for better distribution, which are as follows: 1. Broader concepts of distribution. 2. Simplification and standardization of methods of practice. 3. Organization of industrial and mercantile groups for cooperative action in the interest of better distribution.

First, if we are to solve the problems of our industry successfully, we must broaden our concept of what distribution and storage involve. This is absolutely necessary to any intelligent approach to the problem. As DandW points out, if we picture distribution as transportation, warehousing, handling, packaging, financing, and marketing of merchandise from the place of origin of the raw materials to delivery of the finished product to the final consumer, we get a better understanding of the scope of the problem. It is also very important to recognize that in the future these activities may take place under an international system of distribution.

As we consider the worldwide importance of our problem, the need for simplification and standardization of distribution methods and practices becomes readily apparent. This is the second basic principle of DandW and, as it states, this must be done in all phases of distribution. The importance of this problem cannot be overemphasized, since upon our success in achieving proper and efficient distribution rests the hopes of the world for a future era of peace and security.

We must recognize that this job cannot be done by industry alone, nor should it be left to government. It is a job that business and government must do together. In terms of our problem, business leaders in the distribution field must work closely with government to achieve new simplified and standardized methods. Without going into a detailed analysis of all phases of distribution, let us consider a few of the outstanding problems and the need for standardization and regulation.

Need of Standardization

In the field of transportation, we have rail and truck freight and air and water cargo. Each is important to successful distribution. They have often worked at cross purposes, and there is a crying need both for national and international regulation of rates. There is a need to simplify and standardize methods of operation, to define the scope of operations, and to reduce costs, thereby. For international trade we must standardize packages and develop more efficient systems of unit handling through palletized unit loads. Units of weights and measures must be worked out internationally as well as nationally. In warehousing, we must simplify handling methods, create standards, develop universally accepted warehouse forms, inventory reports, invoice sheets, etc. This list can be extended indefinitely. If we can standardize for war why can't we standardize for peace?

In order to achieve simplification and standardization, DandW points out in its third basic principle that we must have an organization to provide cooperative action. In my opinion, this organization should be formed as a part of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce and further the U. S. Chamber of Commerce should be liaison between government and business. It must interpret the problems of business and present these problems to Government. It must be prepared to furnish leadership to government, and must actually be a part of our new basis of business and government cooperation and operation.

The Chamber of Commerce should strengthen its committees on distribution, production, finance, foreign trade, etc. The distribution committee would be one of the most important and should study ways and means of standardizing distribution. Under such a program business leaders, through the Chamber of Commerce, would have an opportunity to become the most important influence in the future economic and social trends of our country. Various trade associations such as the American Warehousemen's Assn. could also play a more important part under such a program by acting as a sub-committee or liaison between its members and the Chamber committees.

Public Warehousing

As we consider this whole problem, I should like to discuss the storage industry and the very important part it is destined to play in the distribution of the future. During the past few months it has been disappointing to hear and read some of the pessimistic predictions on the future of the storage industry.

Warehousing is the oldest and most historic branch of commerce known to mankind— colorful descriptions of our industry have been written and handed down from biblical times. The storage problem has and will be always present, since it is an economical law of distribution that there is a time lapse between virtually each step of production and consumption. There was a storage problem in the days of agricultural economy, and it is a major problem in the present-day machine era of mass production.

With more production of more goods for more people there are more storage problems, and, consequently, more opportunities for industry. We in the warehouse industry must be alert to the problems and opportunities ahead for we have a major role to perform in the future economics of this country. Proper storage is a fundamental part of efficient and equitable distribution.

The warehouse industry must sell manufacturers on the fundamental principle that storage is vital to successful distribution. More and more manufacturers are beginning to realize that distribution and not production is the big postwar problem. In a recent national survey of the postwar distribution picture conducted by Associated Warehouses, Inc., through a questionnaire mailing, it was found that over 50 per cent of the manufacturers questioned contemplate using more warehouse service in the postwar period. Industry is beginning to realize not only that the number one postwar problem is proper distribution but that one of the most effective ways to accomplish better distribution is through intelligent use of storage facilities.

The men in the warehouse industry have a job to do. They must offer manufacturers the most effective and efficient storage service yet devised. They must streamline their industry, standardize and mechanize, and be prepared to accept the responsibility of leadership in developing a more efficient distribution system.

As a conclusion to our consideration of distribution and warehousing let us consider the domestic storage picture. There are four basic reasons why manufacturers should and will depend upon public warehouses to solve some of their domestic postwar distribution problems. Here they are:

1. Warehouses provide a branch-house service that is available immediately.

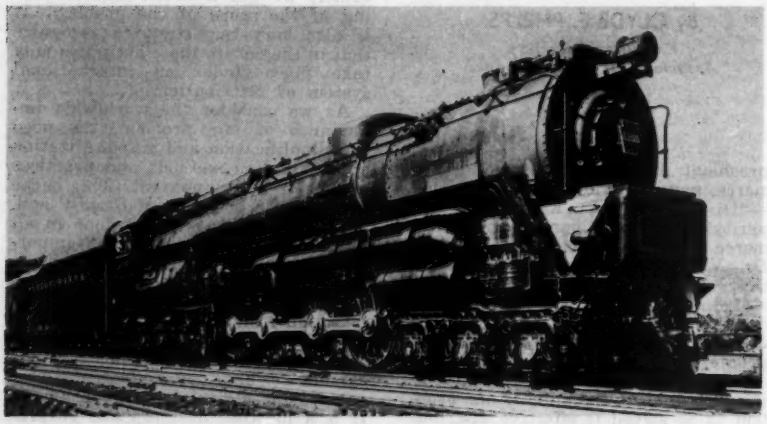
2. Warehouses offer financial stability and protection.

3. Warehouses eliminate branch-house overhead and reduce distribution costs.

4. Warehouses offer experienced service with established goodwill.

The recent postwar warehouse survey by Associated Warehouses, Inc., indicated that national manufacturers and distributors are already thinking in terms of these advantages and are planning increased use of warehouse facilities accordingly.

New Type Turbine Locomotive



Powered by a steam turbine instead of cylinders, pistons and driving rods, this P.R.R. coal-burning engine of new design is the first direct-drive steam turbine locomotive ever built in this country. It is now under test to determine its adaptability to the railroad's long-distance, high-speed passenger and freight service.

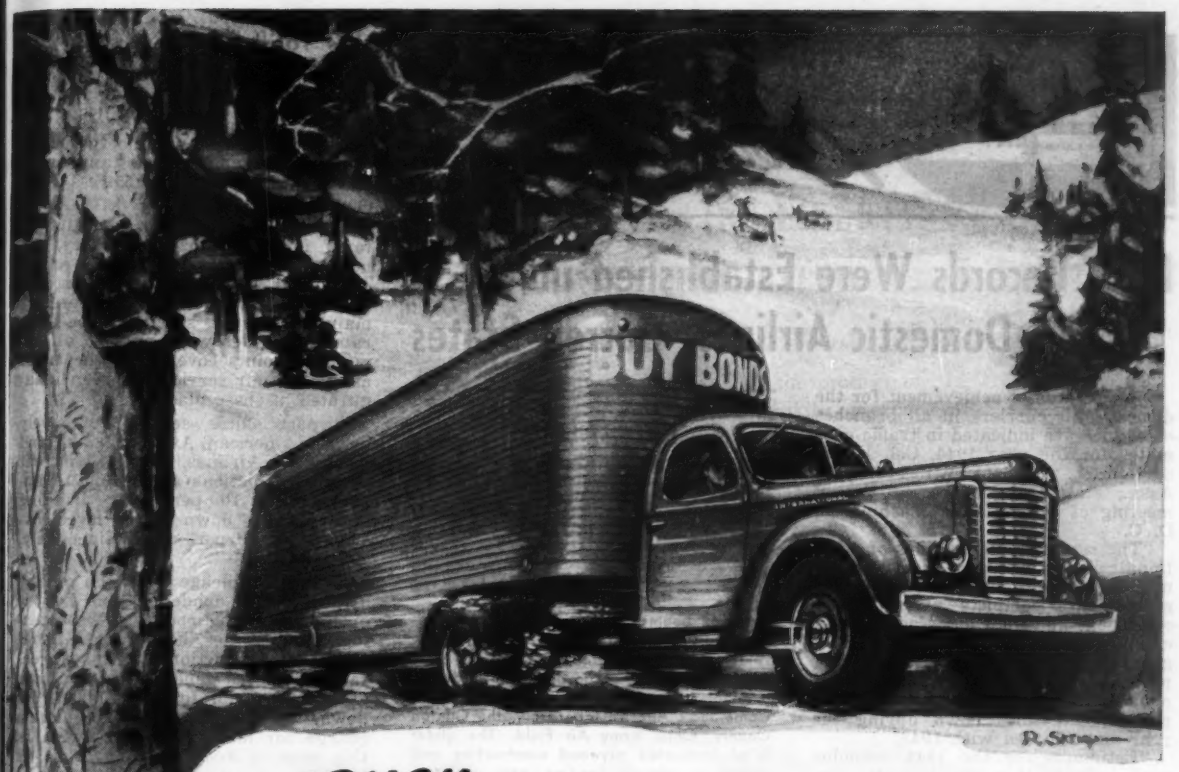
A NEW type of steam locomotive powered by a turbine in place of the cylinders, pistons and driving rods of the conventional design has just been completed and is now undergoing tests for the Pennsylvania Railroad. The turbine is designed to develop 6900-shaft h.p., providing power sufficient to pull a full-length passenger train at 100 m.p.h., or to operate high-class freight trains at high speeds.

The engine and loaded tender weigh nearly a million pounds and cover 123 ft. of track. The tender has a water capacity of 18,000 gal. and carries 37½ tons of coal. The engine was built by the Baldwin Locomotive Works and the Westinghouse Electric Mfg. Co. It is the first steam turbine locomotive to be built in the United States.

The purpose of developing a steam turbine locomotive is to eliminate the reciprocating parts, assure a uniform flow of power to the driving wheels and obtain the economies inherent in a turbine.

The new engine is one of the simplest to operate that has ever been constructed. Both forward and reverse movements, at all speeds, are controlled by a single lever, actuating specially designed pneumatic control apparatus. Automatically functioning devices make incorrect handling of the mechanism impossible.

Heat-treated alloy steel reducing gears, into which the turbine shaft feeds its power, operate continuously in an oil bath and mesh with so little friction that 97 per cent of the turbine's power reaches the driving wheels.



A ~~Straight~~ TRUCK Line is the Shortest Distance Between Two Points

Because Trucks Deliver The Goods All The Way... Without Delay!

Truck freight is the fast freight but that's not all. It's economical. It's dependable. It's convenient.

Trucks deliver the goods—all the way—from loading dock to receiving platform. Demonstrating by over fifty billion ton-miles a year that a truck line is the shortest distance between two points!

That goes for wartime as well as peacetime.

It's true that truck operators have been up against tough going for the past three years. No new trucks, to speak of. Not enough new repair parts. Not enough tires. Not enough men. But trucks are delivering the goods despite these handicaps. More tons, more miles, than ever before!

And 75% of all truck freight is war freight. No wonder Army Generals have told truck operators: "The war transportation job could not have been done without you."

An important share of today's truck freight is hauled by Internationals. For International . . . famous for its rugged dependability . . . is America's favorite heavy-duty truck. Yes, registration figures show that in the ten years before the war, more heavy-duty Internationals were sold than any other make.

We're understandably proud of the great job those Internationals have been doing. They have earned their leadership. And they have set standards that will make tomorrow's International Trucks—and tomorrow's truck transportation—even better than ever.

New Records Were Established in '44 By Domestic Airlines, Gorrell States

New records of achievement for the domestic air carriers in all branches of service are indicated in traffic estimates for the year 1944, Col. Edgar S. Gorrell, president, Air Transport Assn., stated at the recent annual meeting of the ATA at Washington, D. C.

"The return to the airlines of additional planes released from strictly military operations," he stated, "together with complete utilization of equipment and high load factors, will enable the domestic lines to show gains of 22.5 per cent in revenue passenger miles, 24.7 per cent in mail pound-miles, and 7.2 per cent in express pound-miles flown during the year as compared with 1943.

"Estimates for the 1944 calendar year indicate that the domestic carriers will report revenue passenger miles in excess of 2 billion, as compared with 1,632,452,433 in 1943, 1,417,525,877 in 1942, and 1,384,733,-251 in 1941.

"Mail pound-miles flown during the year will exceed 90 billion, as against 72,133,899,534 last year, and 42,332,-048,722 and 26,236,027,723 pound-miles in the years 1942 and 1941, respectively.

"Express pound-miles are estimated at 33.5 billion. This would compare with 31,257,460,811 pound-miles in 1943, 23,803,586,614 pound-miles in 1942, and 10,517,102,345 pound-miles in 1941.

"Gross revenues for 1944 should exceed $150 million, consisting of approximately $108 million passenger revenue, $30 million mail revenue, $9 million express revenue, and $3 million from miscellaneous. In 1943, total gross revenue was $123,368,870, as compared with $108,147,909 in 1942, and $97,311,133 in 1941.

"During the year 112 planes were returned to the air lines by the Army, bringing the total planes at Nov. 1 to 300. This compares with a low of 164 planes at Dec. 31, 1942.

"Despite the increase in seats available, priority travel continues heavy especially on the transcontinental routes and around industrial centers. On the transcontinental flights priorities are running in excess of 70 per cent, while in the heavy industrial areas priorities range from 50 per cent to 59 per cent.

"Before the war a daily employment of planes that averaged six to seven hours of actual flight was regarded as good performance. The daily scheduled flights this year represented a national average of about 1,825 miles per plane, per day, and approximately 11 hours of flying hours per plane in every 24 hours."

The compilation below shows commercial air transport domestic operations for the past two years (1944 figures estimated).

Twin tail booms, used initially in an American glider, constitute one of many new developments incorporated in this U. S. Army Air Force XCG-10 cargo glider shown during a flight test at the Air Technical Service Command's Aircraft laboratory, the Clinton County, Ohio, Army Air Field. The glider is of laminated plywood construction and utilizes a tricycle landing gear with retractable nose wheels.

New Tariff Issued For Air Express

A new tariff, containing many changes in rates and rules affecting property moved by plane between 728 air express points, was announced last month by the Air Express Division of Railway Express Agency.

Marking the eighth domestic air tariff in the company's history, the new express rates will go into effect Jan. 15 at about 575 airport express cities and associated towns presently maintaining air service. The new rates and rules will apply to all remaining points covered by the tariff as soon as air service has been inaugurated at these places.

Airport offices served exclusively by All American Aviation, Inc., and Northwest Airlines, Inc., will benefit by rate reductions amounting to approximately 10 per cent, bringing their charges down to the level covering other airport offices since July, 1943.

Reduced mileage between many airport offices, made possible by the opening of new airports and shortening of air routes, has brought about other rate reductions. "Air express rates are based generally on a charge of 3½c. per lb. for each 100 miles flown, with an appropriate minimum charge for low weight packages. In this way, a reduction in air miles between airport offices permits a corresponding rate reduction," REA officials explained.

A complete set of rules and regulations, adopted with specific reference to air transport, is included in the framework of the new tariff.

Braniff Inaugurates Mexican Air Cargo

A new international air cargo service was inaugurated by Braniff Airways last month between the United States and Mexico, Guy M. Springer, air mail and air cargo traffic manager, has announced.

Airlines Place Orders for More Planes

Four more orders for planes by airlines preparing for accelerated and new airway routes have been announced.

Northeast Air Lines has signed a contract with Douglas Aircraft Co. for purchase of three 60-passenger four-motor DC-4 airplanes costing about $400,000 each, which are expected to go into production sometime next year. The company also contemplates purchase of six additional DC-4s, if CAB certification of over-ocean routes is granted.

To serve proposed new ports of entry at Baltimore, Detroit, Boston and Chicago, Pan American has placed an order for 26 DC-7 Douglas airliners of 108-passenger capacity.

Lockhead Aircraft Corp. has received orders for 17 Lockheed Constellations of which Eastern Airlines ordered 14 for use on the routes connecting such key cities as New York, Boston, Washington, Miami, New Orleans, Chicago, Mexico City, Havana and Panama.

The other three Constellations were bought by National Airlines, recently granted a route between New York and Florida. Officials said the new planes would be used on the New York, Miami, New Orleans run.

LEADERSHIP LIKE LIBERTY ISN'T INHERITED

Industry leadership is the product of vision and courage and skill; of seeing the future from afar, of fighting toward an ideal, of directing men and machines to the fulfillment of a onetime dream. This is the formula. And because leadership, like liberty, can't be inherited, the formula must be applied unceasingly—year after year—to keep such leadership in force. Thus—in their years—have evolved proud Lockheed names: Sirius, Orion, Electra, Vega, Lodestar, Hudson, Lightning P-38. Thus today the Lockheed Constellation, flying for the Army Air Forces, admirably maintains this tradition and is itself a vivid forecast of greater Lockheed planes to come.

QUESTIONS

Q. I never see Lockheed's Constellation at our airport. Why?
—James S., Bangor, Me.

A. All of the Constellations completed so far have been turned over to the U. S. Army Air Forces and are being used for long-distance and overseas transport.

Q. What are the speed and rate of climb of the Constellation?
—Theodore Zielinski Jr., Milwaukee

A. The Constellation cruises at more than 300 m. p. h. Fully loaded it climbs 1/3 mile per minute.

Q. Pilots of the Constellation must be supermen! How can they handle a plane with such big control surfaces?
— Ernest S., Tampa, Fla.

A. As a matter of fact, piloting the Constellation is not tiresome at all. Power boosters actually do the work of moving the rudders, elevators, ailerons and flaps at the pilot's bidding. However, the plane can be flown easily by manual control.

Q. Is the Constellation as big as our biggest bombers?
— Sgt. Jack K., Ft. Benning

A. Constellation is approximately same size as our largest bombers.

SAE Air Cargo Meeting

NOTEWORTHY among the opinions expressed at the third annual air cargo meeting sponsored by the Society of Automotive Engineers at Chicago last month were the following:

A thousand loads of air cargo are possible daily in the foreseeable future with the right type of plane, J. A. Wooten, cargo traffic manager, American Airlines, declared. With present equipment, however, he stated, the potential market for air cargo is limited to new commodities, in new packages, to be merchandised by new methods, in new markets, and it is ridiculous to think of competing with other forms of transportation because of the high level of rates that must be charged for operation with poorly designed equipment for cargo carriage.

The advantages of air cargo transportation, as compared with ground transportation, Dr. R. J. Nebesar, chief engineer, Universal Moulded Products Corp., stated will not be great enough at distances shorter than 500 miles.

The airplane should have a level, truck-height cargo floor, large loading doors, and exceptionally good balance characteristics to insure ease of loading, H. E. Hoben, chief aircraft planning engineer, American Airlines, said. Airport to airport rates of 15c per ton-mile, he added, appear possible within the next five years.

If air cargo is to develop into a real public utility, the necessary action must be taken now, C. P. Graddick, director, air cargo department, United Airlines, declared.

In handling and servicing problems, a solution presents itself in the use of forward docking, fork trucks and pre-loaded cargo pallets, J. B. Morse, Boeing Aircraft Co., suggested.

Air cargo is why the Air Transport Command exists, Col. H. R. Harris, chief of staff, Air Transport Command, declared. Every 24 hours it carries 2,000 tons of freight, in addition to 4 million letters and 200 new passengers every hour. "Anything that will go through the loading door of an aircraft," Col. Harris asserted and that doesn't preclude cutting equipment into pieces to make it fit, can be classed as air cargo for the purpose of ATC operations."

The Naval Air Transport Service has found that "there is no definite bracket that can be used to define air cargo," Capt. C. H. Schildhauer, chief of planning, Office of Chief of Naval Operations, declared. NATS moves everything from mail to 10,000 lb. generator rotors. In Sept., '44, it flew 4,810,039 ton miles of mail and cargo. The Martin "Mars," he stated, has demonstrated great new possibilities as a gigantic carrier of tons of freight and mail as well as passengers.

The tractor-trailer principle as applied to air cargo was described and illustrated by Harry S. Pack, director, functional engineering and air cargo developments, Pennsylvania Central Airlines. One loading at point of origin and one unloading at point of destination by use of detachable cargo units of his design, Mr. Pack said, is possible in the near future.

The use of nets changes tie-down problems, W. C. Mentzer, chief engineer, and E. C. Mitchell, equipment engineer, United Airlines stated in a paper read by Mr. Mentzer. It is possible to expand this idea, he said, and do away with heavy floor structures entirely. In such an installation, it would be possible to use pre-loaded containers with easily disconnected fittings for direct application to floor beams. Only a light walkway would be required if a simple rail installation were used to permit movement of containers up the aisle and into the proper area for tie-down.

Eventually, we can expect simple spring gages that will automatically give us center of gravity and the airplane's gross weight, M. J. Parks, Curtiss-Wright Corp., predicted. This reading will be transmitted to a single instrument, he said, that the loading crew can check at will.

Manufacturers have little conception of what air cargo can do for their business, Allen Dean, transportation manager, Detroit Board of Commerce, declared. Further, they are giving it little study. The engineers of America are way ahead of the business in their faith in the air cargo age.

Experiments conducted during the war will provide the postwar shipper with a wide variety of lightweight packaging material, it was stated by Thomas Wolfe, vice president traffic, Western Airlines, in a paper read by Ray Grant, Western Airlines. It would seem desirable, it was addded, that a uniform set of specifications for freight packaging be established in order to obtain minimum loss and damage and eliminate the danger of competitive shipping of merchandise in inferior containers when high pressure competition commences.

"I express the hope our industry will not follow or be pushed down the same trail as the rails and trucks." A. W. French, director, cargo sales, Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc., said. "Airplanes fly too fast to become enmeshed in such complex tariffs and classifications as those with which our cousins are burdened. At most, we should limit our classifications to a broad classification of commodities. Most surface classifications have been built up because of methods of packing. We hope we will achieve simplification of packing but not to the extent of no packing at all. Airplanes are not freight cars and never will be."

The amount of cargo or air express which will be available to the feeder line is likely to be comparatively small except in isolated cases, Herb Rawdon, assistant chief engineer, Beech Aircraft Corp., predicted, and will represent only a comparatively small portion of operating revenues. This will be due to the relatively high cost of the service. Experience will determine the kind and extent of cargo that may be handled profitably.

Speaking on the future possibilities of glider pick-up, A. B. Schultz, chief engineer, All American Aviation, Inc., predicted that in the realm of commerce we shall see pick-up stations near factories, farms, mines, in jungles, on islands and remote points of land, every place in fact, that might want to tie into the many advantages offered by a fast, flexible, low-cost air transport system.

Analysis indicates that it should be possible to reduce rates substantially from present levels in the near future by the proper use of immediately available equipment, it was stated in a paper prepared jointly by Carlos Wood, chief, preliminary design section, and A. B. Groshere, Jr., Douglas Aircraft Co. This, it was stated, will allow operations in a larger traffic market, permitting large-scale operations that will employ many people and assist in preparation for full-scale air cargo operations in the period following the war.

There is no practical background of experience in the mechanical handling of a large volume of air cargo and little has been done to mechanize the many large freight terminals in the country, C. L. Moon, Mechanical Handling Systems, Inc., stated in a paper which was read in his absence by Dr. John H. Frederick, air cargo, editor of DandW. The very nature of the operation of loading and unloading planes, Mr. Moon pointed out, forces handling by the batch method.

A Basis for Air Cargo Rates

Part 3—Fixing the Actual Rate

It is one thing to talk about the use of operating costs as the basis for arriving at air cargo rates and to point out the complicating factors involved. It is quite another matter to set up a formula for rate construction. This article is an attempt to do that very thing, to suggest a formula.

By JOHN H. FREDERICK
Air Cargo Editor

THE rate a shipper or receiver of air cargo will pay is actually made up of two sets of factors. One set is composed of the factors taken into consideration in dividing the many commodities that may go by air into classes for rate making purposes. This is called classification. Commodities not included in a class or removed from the classification for some reason are given what are known as "commodity rates" but the reasons for levying such rates often take into account the same factors as might be used in grouping commodities into a classification. The second set of factors includes those used in making the rate to be applied to the various classes or groupings that may be set up.

Let us consider the first of these groups of factors: those to be considered in forming air cargo classifications. At least three factors will govern whether a commodity is classified in a high class ("A") or in a lower class for rate making purposes. These are:

Density or weight per cubic foot of space occupied. Unlike other carriers, the airplane cannot be loaded safely above its rated capacity nor can its capacity be increased in any way to meet emergencies. Hanging loads are not as possible in air transportation as they are for motor carriers. Trailer planes have not yet been perfected although the glider has possibilities as the freight car of the air. Therefore, since weight determines the carrying limitation of any plane to a greater extent than is true of any other means of transportation, it would seem logical that air cargo should be classified with density or pounds per cubic foot as the chief governing factor.

Weight being the definite limitation on the amount of cargo a plane may carry, it can be seen that a plane reaches its maximum operating efficiency when its area-cubic capacity is filled with cargo meeting the maximum weight capacity. Although there are many cargoes that meet the requirements both of weight and area, the possibility of cargo always being available to fill the area capacity and the weight capacity at the same time is unlikely.

It is more desirable for an airline to attain the maximum weight capacity of its planes than it is to fill the cubic area. To achieve the desired end air cargo rates might well be levied on the basis, common in water transportation, known as "weight or measurement ship's option." When this method is used, rates are figured on the actual weight of a particular shipment or the measurement weight, whichever is the greater. The use of this method will allow the airlines to reach the weight-carrying capacity of their planes even though their area-capacity be not fully utilized. The measurement weight of a plane can be determined by dividing the area-carrying capacity by the maximum weight limit. This will give the area that can be allotted to a unit, say a pound.

The American Airlines recognized the validity of this method in its air freight tariff. In this, it defines a pound as equalling 400 cu. in. Should a shipment weigh more than this measurement basis per pound, the rate will be charged on the measurement-pounds. Of course, as progress is made in plane design for air cargo the above figure might well vary with the different types of planes used by the airlines.

Perishability. Large quantities of perishables will be shipped by air. The very essence of air transportation is speed, and perishable commodities have usually gravitated toward the most rapid means of transportation. Aside from the increased cost of handling perishables because of special services required, there is also a definite increase in the risk to the carrier for loss and damage. If an airline accepts a shipment it guarantees or wishes to assure perfect delivery. If the perishability of a commodity is high, the risk is increased with the perishability. This increased risk with the added cost of special handling facilities would have a definite effect of increasing the costs of transporting such commodities.

Fragility. Like perishability, breakability, will surely characterize many air cargo shipments. A commodity may be considered to be fragile when special care in handling or special packing is required to avoid damage under normal conditions of air transportation. In fact, the packing or crating of any shipment plays a very important part in the determination of its fragility.

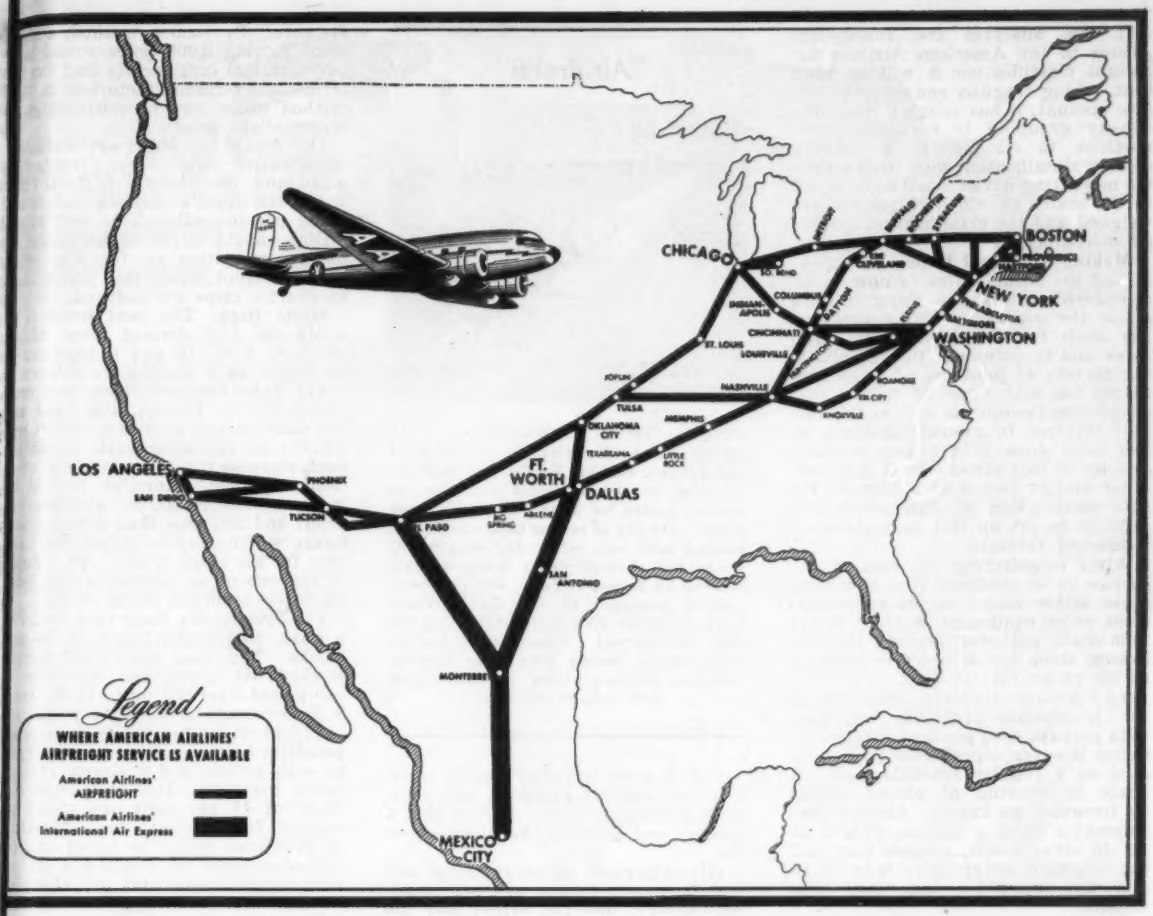
Value per pound. Value is very important in classification. A high-priced or valuable article is much more able to pay a relatively high transportation cost than is a low-priced article. High-cost transportation is much more easily absorbed by a high-value commodity since the transportation cost is proportionally lower than on a low-value commodity and an increase in price to cover the higher transportation costs has less effect on the market than does a corresponding increase on a low-value commodity. Airlines probably will find it wise to require a declared value per pound above the base insurance value of all shipments, which will increase the rate proportionally for more valuable shipments because of the airline common carrier responsibility for loss and damage. Following such a policy all rates in the American Airlines air freight tariff are "released rates" with released values as follows:

Class A—$2.00 per lb. Class B—$1.65 per lb. Class C—$1.35 per lb. Class D—$1.00 per lb., which also applies to articles shipped at commodity rates. Shipments with a declared value of $25,000 will not be accepted by American Airlines unless advance arrangements have been made.

The number of items should be kept down in air cargo classification and the analogous rule allowed to operate more freely than it has for ground carriers. In this way the classification will be kept simple and competitive items will automatically fall into the same categories.

Volume-Density Basis. A very simple classification would be to divide items on a volume-density basis rather than by commodities as has been the usual practice of ground carriers. Such a basis might be as follows:

Any commodity 4 to 8 lb. per cu. ft.—Class A. Any commodity 8 to 12 lb. per cu. ft.—Class B. Any commodity 12 to 16 lb. per cu. ft.—Class C. Any commodity over 16 lb. per cu. ft.—Class D.



How to Use American Airlines' AIRFREIGHT for Air Shipping of Cargo to and from Mexico

1. Cargo destined for Mexico from points in the United States is shipped to Fort Worth, San Antonio or El Paso via Airfreight. Airfreight provides swift air service for bulk cargo at rates low enough to make this form of air shipping of profitable use in day-in, day-out transactions. First morning delivery within 1,500 miles, second morning beyond.

2. From Fort Worth, San Antonio or El Paso, your cargo continues promptly on its way to Mexico via American Airlines' International Air Express. At Monterrey and Mexico City, American's own trucks are ready at the airport to speed your shipment to the consignee. For deliveries to 40 other Mexican cities, American will forward your cargo from Monterrey or Mexico City by the swiftest available means of transportation, or as you direct.

For shipments to the U. S. from Mexico, simply reverse the process.

This new method of international air shipping is simple and practical. And, no matter what your business, it opens the door to an infinite number of profit possibilities in new marketing and merchandising methods. Airfreight sales engineers and Airfreight's research staff are ready to study your individual problems and tell you how Airfreight can be made to work for you. For details, write to Airfreight Division, American Airlines, Inc., 100 East 42nd St., New York 17, N. Y.

AIRFREIGHT IN THE WAR

Currently, Airfreight is obtainable in much less volume than many shippers would desire. Essential war traffic gets first call in American's Flagships, leaving only small capacity for commercial Airfreight cargo. Nevertheless, present operation of Airfreight offers shippers a chance to test and perfect their plans in anticipation of its expanded postwar use.

AMERICAN AIRLINES Inc.

THE NATIONAL AND INTERNATIONAL ROUTE OF THE FLAGSHIPS

If one analyzes the commodity groups in the American Airlines air freight classification it will be seen that, taking fragility and perishability into account, it has roughly used this density grouping in assigning commodities to classes. If a volume-density classification were used a simple measuring device could be attached to the scales on which shipments are weighed and the classification assigned mechanically.

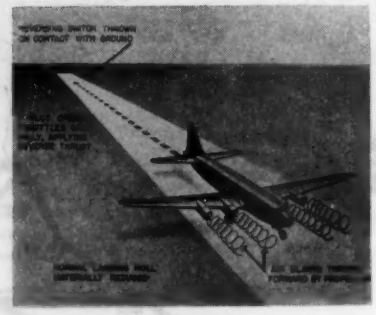
Making of Actual Rates. The making of the actual rates is now to be considered. It is one thing to talk about the use of operating costs as the basis for arriving at air cargo rates and to point out the complicating factors of joint use of passenger planes for both types of traffic, passengers and cargo; as well as the factors involved in ground handling, as has been done in the two previous articles in this series. It is quite another matter to set up a formula for rate construction but this article will attempt to set up this very thing—a suggested formula.

After establishing the cost of the service to be rendered (the operating costs, either based on present equipment or on equipment in sight in the immediate post-war period) the following steps are in order in arriving at air cargo rates.

(A) Assume air cargo expenses at the irreducible profitable minimum with perhaps a 40 per cent empty load factor to cover unprofitable trips operated on a regular schedule, and lost space in stowing of planes caused by irregular packages. Assume that shipments have a median weight 25 lb. In other words, assume that half the shipment weigh more than 25 lb. and the remainder less than that weight.

(B) Assume average overall speed of 150 m.p.h. to cover all trips and routes and relate wages and other time variables to this speed.

"Air Brakes"



REVERSE THRUST PROPELLERS . . . An artist's sketch illustrates the principle of aerodynamic braking, the first practical application of reverse thrust propellers as landing brakes for large multi-engine land planes. The use of reverse blade angles for braking adds new safety and economy to the landing of large planes, it was revealed recently by Robert L. Earle, vice president-general manager of the Curtiss-Wright Corp. propeller division, in announcing the new development. Aerodynamic braking also reduces taxiing time after landing, increases manueverability on the ground and reduces tire wear.

(C) Assume terminal ground handling and clerical expenses per shipment to average 35c. Add to this a pick-up and delivery charge of about 33c.

(D) Ascertain terminal rental and maintenance costs and add two terminal factors; one for origin and the other for destination terminals, plus any intermediate terminal or interchange factors on all shipments of over 500 miles, for each 500 miles of distance. By such a method, a shipment moving 3,000 miles would have two terminal cost factors and five intermediate terminal factors in it. This method takes care of rehandlings at intermediate points.

(E) Add in the direct operating, administrative and other irreducible costs and the result of A+B+C+D+E will equal a variable cost or expense per ton-mile. This cost to the airline should never be under-cut to meet competition or for any other reason except when full plane loads or charter trips are assured.

Basic Rate. The next move is to apply the cost derived from adding steps A, B, C, D, and E together to profitable rate making as follows:

(1) Take the irreducible rate composed of two factors, the fixed and the variable, and assuming that it represents an operating ratio of 65 per cent, increase it to cover general overhead expenses, return on capital investment, depreciation, obsolescence, profit and reserves, thus arriving at a figure which may be called the basic rate for air cargo traffic. This figure is the return an airline would want all of its traffic to bring to it.

(2) Prepare the basic rate figure on a basic rate scale, based on 50-mile blocks. This basic scale could then be worked out above the minimum in one-pound intervals up to 10 lb. and a 5 lb. intervals above that point.

(3) Above or below the basic scale, penalties or premiums could be given to each article and a simple classification prepared. It is suggested that steps of 15 per cent are about the nearest for practical use. Penalties or premiums would be based on: (a) volume-density of shipments of certain commodities; and (b) the risk-damage (carrier liability or insurance feature) for loss or breakage.

The Final Scale. The above are suggested steps to follow in setting up air cargo rates. As for the final rate scale itself, it could then be made up to suit the advertising and publicity policy of a carrier. It might be a good idea to have 150 per cent of basic as Class A, and the other lettered classes at 10 per cent intervals down to 50 per cent of Class A, (which would really be 75 per cent of basic). Provision for particularly dangerous or valuable articles could be made by special classes of 1½ times A and 2 A. There would still be a little room also for rates under Class F or 50 per cent of Class A to provide for some commodity rates above out-of-pocket costs, that is in the margin between 65 per cent and 75 per cent of basic. Basic, of course, would be just under Class D and above Class E.

There have been some who advocate more than one type of service for air cargo. What the airlines have to sell, in addition to actual transportation of goods, is saving of time. The first class service would guarantee delivery anywhere in the United States within 24 hours and would be expedited in the same manner as air mail. The second class would take longer but still beat ground transportation halfway across the continent. The third class would be carried strictly subject to space being available and if no space became available within a certain time the airline would have the right to arrange for movement by most rapid ground transportation.

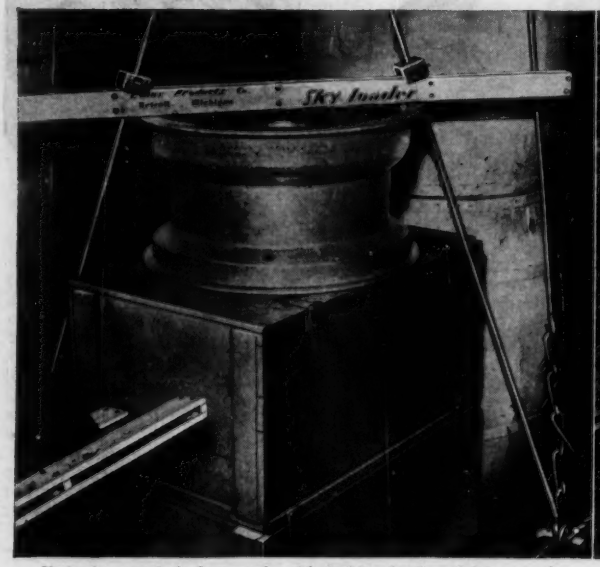
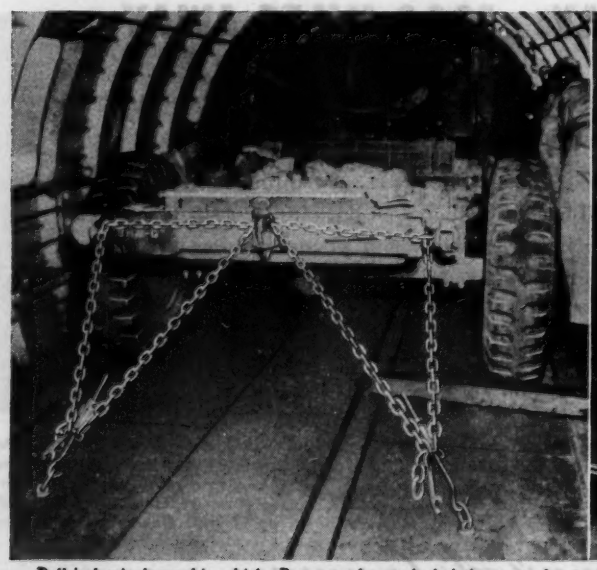
EVANS SKYLOADER



Skyloader metal tie-down rods with locking hardwood beams make odd-shaped or heavy cargo virtually part of the airplane. Skyloader equipment is simple to use, light in weight, eliminates all slack.

Evans Skyloader rope hooks and tighteners hold mixed cargo secure in flight. Note the absence of fist-sized knots. A few simple twists of the tighteners make cargo fast or release it for speedy off-loading.



Pull jacks tie-down this vehicle. Permanently attached chain cannot be lost. Jack hooks into floor tie-ring, chain loops through pintle hook and back to jack. Tension is applied with handle. Locking is automatic.

The Navy "battens down" these tires in the modern Evans way. Skyloader metal tie-down rods and hardwood beams will hold the load securely to its destination.

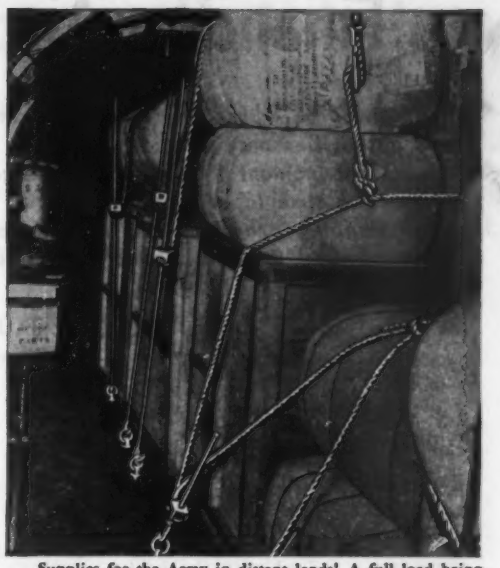
REQUIPMENT

Developed by America's Pioneer Loading Engineers



Supplies for the Army in distant lands! A full load being delivered quickly, safely by the Air Transport Command. Here Skyloader rope hooks and tighteners do the trick.

Even before shippers lifted up their eyes to the boundless possibilities in air freight, Evans loading engineers were hard at work on Skyloader equipment.

Here are specialists in the field of packing and shipping. From their research and practical field experience came the Evans Auto-Loader to speed distribution of automobiles, the Utility Loader to eliminate damage in box car shipments of all kinds, and a tailored service in loading and tie-down equipment which has saved millions of dollars for manufacturers in the export as well as domestic field.

Skyloader—boon to shippers

Evans Skyloader fills a vital need. In the first sky freighters, cargo was lashed down with ropes which for tautness depended on the hand-tied "sheep shanks" and square knots inherited from the sea. But, in flight, the cargo may work loose to damage itself and the plane or imperil the crew. A man just can't tie a rope tight enough to secure heavy cargoes against pressures developed through banking, climbing, up or down currents, and other turbulence.

Evans Skyloader equipment secures the load as nothing else does. It is of three types: Rope hooks and tighteners used with rope lashings; for heavier loads, hold-down rods and beams mechanically locked; and the pull jack with chain and positive lock, which not only secures jeeps, tractors and other mobile equipment but expedites off- and on-loading.

Use Evans loading service

Many airplane manufacturers, airline operators and shippers are calling on the services of Evans engineers to solve their loading problems. The Army and Navy are using Evans Skyloader equipment and other wartime Sky Products to speed the transportation of men and materiel at battlefronts around the world. All the skill and experience of Evans loading technicians is at your service. Write for details today.

Financing Air Imports

Cooperation of warehouse managers, air carriers, banks and customs authorities may become necessary to cut down on the time requirement incidental to import air cargo shipments at destination points. The time lapse may be reduced by incorporating into air cargo shipping practices the services and facilities of centrally located bonded public warehouses.

FINANCING of surface shipments by banks has been perfected through use of "to order" bills of lading. Ownership of goods in such shipments is lodged with the holder of the bill of lading, and the designation "to order" is meant to show that the holder of the bill of lading is temporarily someone other than the shipper or consignee. In most cases, a bank has advanced money on the goods in the particular shipment which is used as collateral.

Until compliance with certain conditions of payment, the bank or its correspondent retains possession of the bill of lading and thereby of the goods. Only as the consignee complies with terms of payment as specified by the bank with a "to order" shipment is the bill of lading turned over to give him right of delivery from the carrier.

Transfer of the bill of lading from the bank to the consignee indicates that rights of the former as temporary holder of goods in the "to order" shipment have been acknowledged and properly cared for by the latter.

The "to order" bill of lading is consequently negotiable and can readily be endorsed by the bank as temporary holder to the consignee as final possessor of the shipment.

Airwaybill Unsatisfactory

In air cargo transportation no airwaybill of a negotiable kind has been provided generally by the air carriers.

The customary airwaybill may be construed as non-negotiable with the result that the consignee and not a third party, such as a bank, becomes the legal person entitled to the airwaybill and consequently to the goods, regardless of whether financing by a bank is involved or not.

To offset this hazard pending creation of a negotiable or "to order" airwaybill, the practice has developed of consigning shipments in which financing is involved, directly to the bank concerned with the grant of the particular credit. The airwaybill specifically indicates in such instances that the shipment is consigned to the bank, which must endorse it before the final consignee can effect delivery to himself.

Hesitancy is felt with regard to this practice. Banks claim they are not in the business of physical handling of shipments as becomes possible whenever shipments are consigned to them. Rather, they feel that their business is in documents of title to goods on behalf of shippers and consignees with whom financial arrangements are concluded.

The Time Element

Offhand, it seems that perfection of a "to order" airwaybill along lines of surface "to order" bills of lading will provide the answer. The element of time, however, has to be considered with air transportation and while a "to order" airwaybill will help, it does not provide the entire answer.

A manufacturer in London, for instance, may wish to make a shipment of expensive chemicals to a distributor in New York, and a bank there may agree to handle the financing. In that case, the manufacturer will deliver the chemicals to the English airport. A copy of the airwaybill received from the air carrier to be of any use, will have to accompany the shipment. It cannot be sent back to the London bank and then forwarded to New York by a second plane together with instructions to the correspondent bank in New York on procedure for handling financial features of the shipment.

If this process were followed, the goods would be in New York before the arrival of documents from the bank. Use of the goods would be delayed pending arrival of the "to order" documents. This delay would offset benefits from time economy of air transportation.

Some procedure other than the one usually followed with surface transport, therefore, becomes necessary with "to order" air cargo shipments.

It may be advisable for the manufacturer in London before delivering the chemicals to the airport of exit to have a note of instruction from the bank to the air carrier indicating the shipment should be recorded as "to order" on the airwaybill with name of the correspondent bank in New York also inserted in it. There should be further instruction that this "to order" airwaybill is to be delivered together with the commercial invoice, consular document, insurance certificate and draft, not to the final consignee, but to the correspondent bank in New York as promptly as possible after arrival at destination.

An additional function would be requested of the air carrier, namely that of notifying the final consignee that documents of title to an air shipment for him have been lodged with the correspondent banks in his city and that upon compliance with the financing terms of that bank, the documents of title can be turned over to him and, upon clearance through the customs, possession taken of the goods.

After a representative of the New York distributor has called on the bank correspondent and paid the draft, if on sight; or signed it, if 30 or 60 days is the period accorded for payment, the documents of title to the air shipment would be turned over to him.

The distributor, possessing the "to order" airwaybill endorsed by the correspondent bank is then in position to have the goods cleared through the customs and delivery made to him.

Cargo and Papers

This procedure would resemble somewhat the one with surface shipments. There would be one difference in that arrangements would have to be made in advance by instructions of the initiating bank to the air carrier so that documents of title may move on the same plane with the shipment and thereby assure arrival of goods and documents at their destination at the same time.

This speed-up of documents at point of origin should not be difficult to work out with the cooperation of shipper, bank and air carrier. The main objective would be simultaneous delivery of goods and documents of title from airport of origin to airport of destination.

In New York, as the point of destination, in the instance mentioned above, a speed-up would also have to be effected if benefits of time-saving with air transport are not to be impaired.

It takes time to transmit documents of title from the airport of destination to the bank correspondent. Then, too, the final consignee, or the distributor of the chemical products, in our illustration, has to be notified that an air shipment has arrived for him and that documents of title need to be obtained from the correspondent bank. Time is also involved in connection with the visit of the distributor to the correspondent bank to comply with the terms of payment and to receive the documents of title.

Finally, the distributor has to have the "to order" airwaybill endorsed by the correspondent bank, and presented to the air carrier in order that the shipment may be cleared through the customs and delivery of the goods made to him.

Cost Factors in Distribution

Traffic managers will do more to improve the traffic department's position in the business structure of manufacturing concerns by insisting that accounting systems uncover the cost of transportation than by any other single approach. By demanding actual transportation costs they not only will advance the traffic department to its proper place, but they will be of greater value to industry.

By HENRY G. ELWELL
Traffic Consultant

o o o

IN July, 1944, the New York Journal of Commerce carried an editorial entitled "The Emphasis on Costs." The ideas expressed are worth pondering. For example:

"The present seller's market will doubtless continue in many industries for a limited period after the war," the editorial stated, "but thereafter industry's primary problem will again become mass distribution, rather than adequate production. When a buyer's market returns, lower costs will be the key not only to prosperity, but even to mere survival in many cases."

Similarly, Albert Ramond in a recent speech at Los Angeles pointed to the need for "the correction of inefficient managerial methods."

Placing the Blame

One of the more important of the "inefficient managerial methods" which ought to be corrected is management's present lack of interest in controlling and reducing costs of transportation relative to the individual manufacturing establishment. However, this lack of interest is not entirely the fault of management. Part of the blame lies right with the cost accountants, and some of it can be traced straight to the traffic managers.

The preceding article in this series carried a chart outlining the major factors making up "transportation cost." In referring to the chart attention was directed to the fact that management, in general, seldom gives any consideration to the segregation of these items.

There are exceptions. For instance, one executive has stated: "If the large class of industrial officials who have not already done so, would grasp the idea that cost items of transportation should be isolated they would be astounded at the actual total amount spent for transportation — amounts now generally 'hidden' in production and selling costs." He added: "How are costs of transportation going to be reduced if cost accounting practice is not adjusted to show the separate items?"

Segregation of Costs

This executive agreed that "transportation cost" includes freight inwards, materials handling inwards, materials handling outwards, and freight outwards as set forth in the chart mentioned above. He also said that in his organization the accounting system does segregate these costs thereby making it possible to determine costs of transportation and provide a controlling monthly factor.

This led him to further plain speaking. "Yes," he exclaimed, with a twinkle in his eyes, "with our method we can really determine whether our traffic department is operating in an efficient manner. Our cost system enables us to keep track of the traffic department's work and brings about real cooperation between all of our departments in matters pertaining to transportation. "Yes, sir!" he concluded, "our cost accounting method keeps the traffic department on its toes, and also assists it to help the company control costs of transportation."

The company just mentioned is obtaining the full worth of a traffic department. The traffic department is occupying its proper place as a fully recognized division, because it is of definite value to the company. And the situation is largely because all concerned appreciate that a cost accounting system should include details of "transportation cost."

The attitude of executives who have not seriously weighed the subject is illustrated by a disclosure lately made to the writer by the superintendent of a manufacturing plant. He questioned the need for segregating items to show "transportation cost."

"What good would be accomplished by doing the extra work of separating so-called costs of transportation along the lines you advocate?" he asked. "After all, do not these go into cost accounts of production or selling? Why complicate things by setting up another account?"

"Would you be satisfied?" we asked, "to accept a partial figure of monthly production cost without any detailed break-down? Would you be able to study efficiently how to reduce production costs in the absence of a step-by-step enumeration of the costs?"

At these questions an expression of understanding crossed his face. "I see your point," he said.

Traffic Managers' Responsibility

On the whole, a traffic department is the one department which does not receive detailed costs appertaining to its activities. Undoubtedly the traffic department, in industry collectively, will not be accepted as one of the essential departments until traffic managers realize the need for these figures and convince management that cost accounting departments should furnish complete costs of transportation.

For example, in order to consider how the transportation portion of "selling cost" might be reduced, it must first be determined what is the distribution portion of "transportation cost," since cost of distribution, of any particular company, is part of the cost of selling.

This data should be furnished by the cost accountant, together with a break-down showing: cost of materials handling outwards; and freight (also express) outwards.

A review of "freight outwards" might show the need for a classification adjustment, or even for making a change in the entire procedure of the company's method of distributing its products.

The Four Charts

There are four charts accompanying this article. Charts 1 and 2 jointly will serve to illustrate the foregoing in an elementary way, for after all the less complicated a chart, the more readily its meaning can be grasped.

In these two charts A represents the shipping department of a company, 1, 2, 3, and 4 are meant to indicate the existing routes used to forward products to respective customers X; and 5 represents the route to distributing point B from where shipments are made to customers X via route 6. If the total cost of 5 and 6 are found to be less than the cost of 1, 2, 3 and 4 combined, the answer, excluding any other factors, will be obvious.

The principles set forth in these two charts can be applied variously to numerous approaches of the problem of lowering costs of transportation and speeding up deliveries by reducing the time element. Chart 2, for instance, might be the result revealing that it would be more advantageous for the manufacturer to discard direct shipment of less-than-carload consignments, and adopt the stop-off in transit plan consigning carloads to warehouses for distributing goods to customers.

Again, emerging from the elemental to the slightly less so, Charts 3 and 4 disclose a possible variation with a somewhat different set-up. Here, Chart 4 might reveal that in certain sales territories the stop-off-in transit privilege would be advisable, but that the scheme covered by Chart 3 should be continued in the case of purchasers not located in heavily populated sales areas.

Naturally, recognition must be given to such matters as the convenience to buyers which, notwithstanding, must be applied in connection with managerial policy; not overlooking the fact that if the convenience costs money, the purchasers eventually pay for it in the price of the products sold to them.

Of course, while only four customers have been indicated in the charts, for simplifying the illustrations, in actual practice where there will be many, there might be possibilities of more diversified methods of distribution.

Cost of Selling

To extend the idea: it is conceivable that the portion of cost of selling which is made up of advertising, might be reduced where considerable quantities of advertising material are involved. Thus, that portion of "transportation cost" which is "freight inwards" applicable to advertising from source of supply and allocated to "advertising" by the cost accountant, possibly might be subject to reduction after analysis by the traffic department.

But, and this is the point to be stressed, the traffic department cannot make an intelligent effort to reduce all of the various costs which make up "transportation cost" unless and until it is informed concerning these various costs. True, the traffic department, on its own initiative, can compare freight rates and probably obtain reductions from the carriers, but this is only scratching the surface in view of all of the costs.

And there are as many good reasons why the traffic department should have this information (detailed costs of transportation) as there are reasons why the cost accountant furnishes the production department with the details which make up its monthly cost of production; such as cost of raw materials used, labor costs, power and light, etc.

It is evident that traffic managers will do more to improve the traffic department's position in the business structure of manufacturing concerns by insisting that accounting systems uncover the cost of transportation than by any other single approach. By demanding actual transportation costs they not only will advance the traffic department to its proper place, but they will be of greater value to industry. And this "greater value to industry" is of far more importance than any aggrandisement of an individual traffic manager, or of traffic managers as a group.

In this third article, as in the second, attention is primarily given to the problem of cost of transportation as it relates to individual industrial organizations; that parts of "distribution cost" such as "materials handling outwards" and "freight outwards" should be segregated as portions of the over-all "transportation cost" of separate companies.

A Basic Fact

Nevertheless, as brought out in the opening article, one must not lose sight of the basic fact that "distribution" in its broadest sense begins with the raw materials and continues on through until the finished products are in the possession of the ultimate consumers.

It should be understood that traffic management deals with those costs of distribution in industry which are created by transportation.

Beyond the costs of transportation are many others of over-all distribution which will have to be surveyed critically by management, sales departments, production departments, purchasing departments, accounting departments, warehouse organizations, and wholesalers, and other distributors; and also railroads, water carriers, highway carriers and airway carriers.

All of these, not forgetting retailers, working singly and in cooperation with each other will have to tackle the job if the riddle of "mass distribution" is to be solved and total costs reduced.

The importance of cost in distribution cannot be over-emphasized because "lower costs will be the key not only to prosperity, but even to mere survival in many cases."

Surplus Property Storage

REPRESENTATIVES of the War Department and of RFC have just completed a series of visits to all nine Service Command areas in connection with the establishment of surplus property storage and disposal centers under the program of the Space Control Committee, according to C. E. Nichols, secretary, Merchandising division, American Warehousemen's Assn., Washington, D. C. Sites have been selected for approximately 80 such centers. Many of these are now available, but others cannot be allocated to this purpose until V-E Day.

So far as practicable, government properties will be used in this program, but some other facilities will be leased and existing buildings will be supplemented by the erection of temporary shelters where necessary.

Operating contracts have been closed or are in the final stages of negotiation for a substantial majority of the disposal centers. Selections are being rapidly made of operators for the balance of the facilities.

RFC and the War Department are cooperating closely in the acquisition and improvement of sites for receiving contract termination inventories, and RFC will administer the operation of the disposal centers for materials and equipment assigned to it for disposal.

Material Handling Institute Organized By Handling Equipment Mfrs.

THE formation of The Material Handling Institute was announced Dec. 15 by Lawrence J. Kline, Mercury Mfg. Co., Chicago, who has been elected to serve as the first president of the organization. J. Faulkner Thomas, Thomas Truck & Caster Co., Keokuk, Ia., was elected vice-president, and Walter S. McCann, who has had long experience in trade association work, will serve as acting secretary-treasurer.

Directors elected include: S. K. Towson, Elwell-Parker Electric Co., Cleveland; Lester M. Sears, Towmotor Corp., Cleveland; Walter C. Stuebing, Lift Trucks, Inc., Cincinnati; M. W. Heinritz, Philco Corp., Storage Battery Division, Trenton, N. J.; H. A. Carter, Geneva Metal Wheel Co., Geneva, O., and L. C. Backart, Rapid Standard Co., Grand Rapids, Mich.

Interest in materials handling in industry and distribution has mounted steadily since the start of the war, it is pointed out. The wheeled industrial transportation equipment industry, which during 1943 had sales in excess of $300,000,000 has made substantial contributions to the war effort in connection with the production and distribution of supplies and equipment required on the fighting front. There are about 165 concerns with a major interest in the industry, it is said. Among those which have already affiliated with the Institute, according to the announcement, are:

Automatic Transportation Co.; The Baker-Raulang Co.; Crescent Truck Co.; Divine Brothers Co.; Domestic Industries, Inc.; Economy Engineering Co.; Thomas A. Edison, Inc.; Electric Products Co.; Electric Wheel Co.; Elwell-Parker Electric Co.; Fate-Root-Heath Co.; Faultless Caster Corp.; Geneva Metal Wheel Co.; W. F. Hebard & Co.; Hertner Electric Co.; Lewis-Shepard Co.; Lift Trucks, Inc.; Mechanical Handling Systems, Inc.; Mercer Engineering Works, Inc.; Mercury Manufacturing Co.; Nutting Truck & Caster Co.; Pallet Sales Co.; Philco Corp.; Rapid-Standard Co., Inc.; The Ready-Power Co.; Ross Carrier Co.; Saginaw Products Corp.; Silent Hoist & Crane Co.; Sterling Lumber & Supply Co.; Thomas Truck & Caster Co.; Towmotor Corp.; Vaughan Motor Co.; Yardman, Inc.; Yale & Towne Mfg. Co.

The new organization, which is said to be virtually a confederation of trade associations in this field, is a non-profit organization designed to serve as a medium for the exchange of facts and information relating to industrial material handling and the activities of manufacturers in that field. It is proposed that application will be made for a corporate charter.

Membership, it is stated, will be of three classes: an active membership group, comprised of manufacturers whose major interest is in this particular field; an associate membership group, composed of manufacturers with a secondary interest in the field; and a fellow membership group, consisting of individuals interested in materials handling.

In announcing the formation of the new Institute, Mr. Kline directed attention to the growing interest in materials handling and its present and future importance in the nation's economy. "Only recently," he said, "has it become recognized that but about 20 per cent of the time required to convert raw materials to finished goods is needed for actual productive processing. The remainder of the time is required for material handling, movements in or between processes."

Temporarily the Institute will have headquarters at 208 S. LaSalle St., Chicago 4, Ill.

A Forward Step

For many years the editors of D and W have felt there was a need for an association of manufacturers of materials handling equipment. This was stressed particularly in our materials handling issue last July both in an editorial entitled "Organization Needed," and in a special article by the writer entitled "Where Do We Go From Here?"

We are gratified, therefore, that some of the equipment manufacturers have formed the "Material Handling Institute," which, we believe, is a step in the right direction.—Matthew W. Potts, materials handling editor.

Mechanical Engineers Study Handling Problems

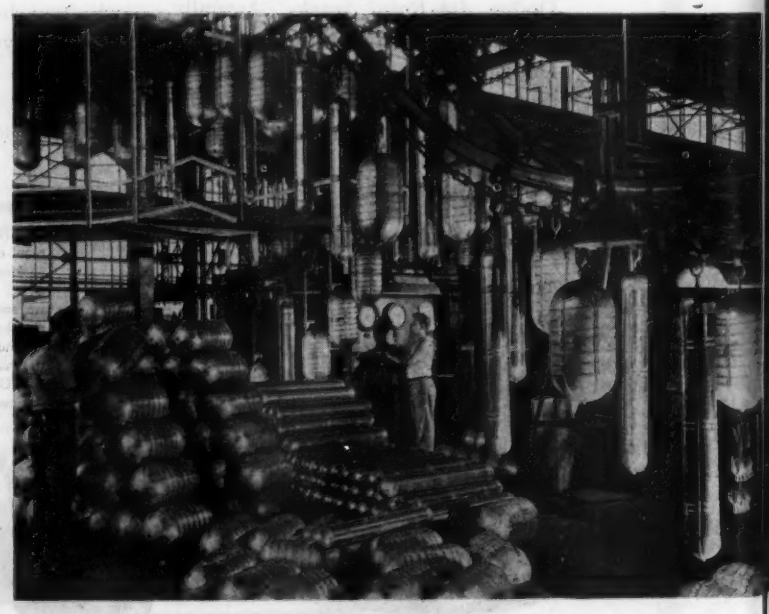
Standardization of models for plant layout and planning featured discussions at the annual meeting of the Materials Handling Division, American Society of Mechanical Engineers last month at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York. A special paper presented by R. W. Mallich, Westinghouse Electric Mfg. Co., East Pittsburgh, Pa., stressed the importance of three-dimensional models for pre-viewing machinery arrangements in the reconversion period.

While stress was laid on the three-dimensional models being made of lathes, drill presses, etc., in the writer's opinion, here is an opportunity for materials handling manufacturers to prepare models of their machines, which they have to offer, so that the handling system can be fitted into the planning of the engineers.

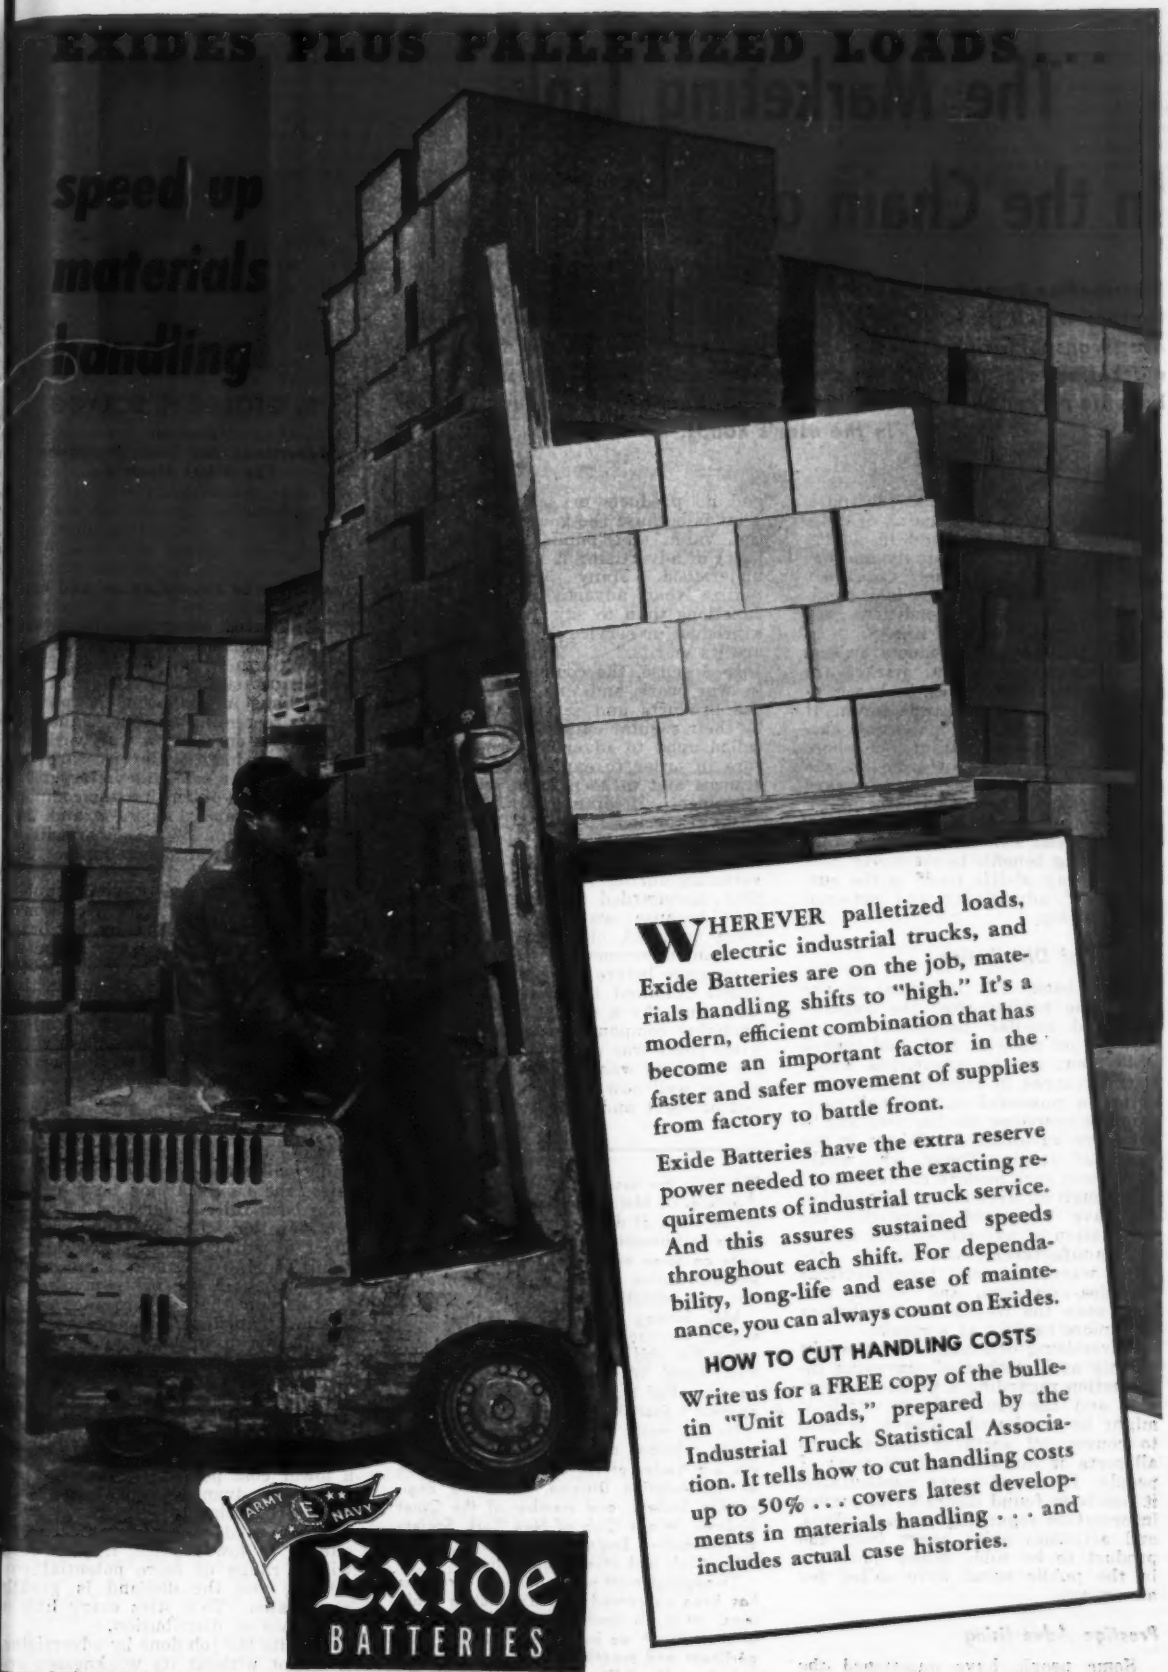
A committee was appointed to set up standards for models. The consensus of those present was that the models should be built on a scale of ¼ in. to the foot, so as not to require too much room in the layout.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Materials Handling Division, Jas. A. Jackson, General Electric Co., Schenectady, N. Y., was elected chairman of the Materials Handling Committee for 1945.—Matthew W. Potts.

Modern Mass Production



A new stainless steel oxygen cylinder with improved shatterproof qualities is being produced by the Firestone Steel Products Co., Akron, O., for all types of American warplanes. This photograph which emphasizes the increasing use of materials handling equipment in modern industry, shows a workman stacking the type of cylinder used on the B-29 superfortress. Another size is seen in the center of the picture, while a workman on the right operates equipment used for hydraulic testing of the ability of the cylinders to withstand pressure.



WHEREVER palletized loads, electric industrial trucks, and Exide Batteries are on the job, materials handling shifts to "high." It's a modern, efficient combination that has become an important factor in the faster and safer movement of supplies from factory to battle front.

Exide Batteries have the extra reserve power needed to meet the exacting requirements of industrial truck service. And this assures sustained speeds throughout each shift. For dependability, long-life and ease of maintenance, you can always count on Exides.

The Marketing Link In the Chain of Distribution

Distribution tomorrow will demand a broader knowledge of all the factors which go to make up this almost endless chain whose links are transportation, handling, warehousing, packaging, financing, marketing, etc. Advertising and salesmanship in the future will sell benefits rather than merchandise, the product of the product, its use in the user's hands.

By GEORGE H. SCRAGG
Director
Advertising and Sales Promotion
The White Motor Co.

IT is well recognized that the spark which starts the chain of distribution moving is found in advertising and sales, with supply and demand furnishing the fuel. Consumer need plus buying power and confidence furnish ideal conditions for prosperity all along the line.

Mere existence of products or services and of a potential market are insufficient in themselves, as has been demonstrated time and time again. It is necessary to tell potential customers of the advantages of those products or services in order to win demand. In some cases it is necessary to batter down heavy barriers of resistance in order to get the story across, to sell something which offers outstanding benefits to the buyer. Our modern way of life itself is the outgrowth of advertising and personal salesmanship.

Wheels of Distribution

Hark back, for instance, to the radio, the refrigerator, the automobile, and similar products. People frowned on them at first, and turned a deaf ear on the arguments which were advanced in their behalf. It required a powerful educational campaign to overcome the barriers and to put these advantageous things in the hands of people. Today, who would do without such modern conveniences?

Through all avenues of distribution we have witnessed repeatedly the stimulation of advertising and selling by manufacturers, wholesalers, jobbers, warehousemen, transportation agencies, retailers, and others, and have seen the wheels of distribution turn more rapidly as a result.

Advertising originally was thought of only as a method of conveying information regarding a product or service and the source from which it might be purchased. Now it is used to convey all sorts of messages to all sorts of markets and all sorts of people. In recent years, particularly, it has been found desirable to convey information regarding policies, plans, and activities quite apart from the product to be sold. Many questions in the public mind have called for an answer.

Prestige Advertising

Some people have questioned the value of advertising during the war period by those concerns who have had no products or services to sell. That is because the good will of prestige value (the public relations aspect) of advertising is not universally understood. Many people fail to realize that advertising has other functions than to say "we have such a product or service to sell and these are its merits."

In a sense, the companies engaged in war work and unable to provide the products and services demanded by their regular cutsomers, have been called upon to advertise as never before in order to explain the circumstances and to keep faith with their customers. Holding goodwill for the postwar period is vital. To indicate this, one has only to recall what happened to many firms that ceased advertising during World War I. While they disregarded their regular markets because war production kept them occupied, other concerns, some of them newcomers in the field, kept a message before the public, and the public followed them after the war was over. As a result, many non-advertising companies went under soon after peace was restored and the fight for markets was resumed. We know all too well now that we cannot drop out of sight and expect customers of years past to remember us and come back to us.

As indicated, advertisers have faced a new responsibility during war time to keep faith with the market forces that have supported them in the past. Thus it has been the part of wisdom to remind customers that the company is engaged in war work and that its products or services are now working in the cause of victory. Evidence must be given that the company intends to stay in business and that its regular line of products will be resumed once war demands are fully met.

In referring to war, sound public relations are called for. Pride may well be included in the copy, but bragging has no legitimate part. For instance, companies which have shouted from the house tops, so to speak, that they have been winning the war almost single-handed have definitely lost caste with the public. And rightfully so. Advertising should be sincere at all times.

Advertising and Prices

While the ultimate goal of advertising will always be to promote more sales, the ramifications have not always been fully understood. A major consideration, for instance, is the effect of advertising on price. As a result of snap judgment, some people, particularly in the past, have voiced the opinion that advertising was a needless expense. Exactly the opposite has been proved time and time again. Instead of being an expense, it has reduced the cost of goods in many instances. This is true because advertising builds markets, and increased sales permit increased production which, in turn, makes possible a lower cost per unit. We all know the cost advantages of large scale mass production.

When products or services can be offered at lower price, it puts them within range of more potential customers, and the demand is greatly accelerated. This stirs every link in the chain of distribution.

Despite the job done by advertising, it is not without its weaknesses and inefficiencies. Improvement, however, has been steady. Years ago advertis-

THIS is the second of a series of three articles by Maj. Scragg on some of he links in the chain of distribution. Last month he wrote on transportation. Next month he will write on some of the probabilities of postwar distribution in the fields of transportation and marketing.

Maj. Scragg is well known in the automotive, aviation and advertising fields. He was a flier and aircraft designer before the First World War, and during the war he became chief technical officer, Night Bombardment Section, A. E. F.

He is a major in the Civil Air Patrol and public relations officer of the Ohio Wing. He is a trustee of the Early Birds, chairman of the Aviation Division, Cleveland Engineering Society, and member of the Quiet Birdmen, Wings Club of New York, Society of Automotive Engineers, Cleveland Advertising Club and other organizations.

Throughout most of his business career he has been concerned with distribution problems. With his background and knowledge of the subject, we believe he has some very pertinent and practical suggestions to offer industry.—The Editor.

ing to an extent was a hit or miss proposition, and no one knew the results. Today, we map its course on the basis of research and study, plan our copy in line with projected needs, and, frequently, measure the results. But there is plenty of room for improvement.

Reducing Waste

As in so many phases of our distribution methods, wastes in advertising have been inherent. We have not yet learned to control the wastes in advertising to the same degree that we have eliminated wastes in the production field. Efficiency demands a full understanding of every factor in the distribution system if we are to avoid waste motion, wasted materials, and misguided messages. We find many glaring examples of waste, which, in most instances, may be corrected merely by an application of common sense.

There are many questions we should ask ourselves in our efforts to cut down wastes in advertising and marketing. Are we properly equipped from the standpoint of highly trained manpower? Are we supplying the right mechanical aids to increased production? How practical are we in working out advertising schedules? To what degree do the different media overlap? Will two papers take the place of three? Are we using posters when we should be using magazines, or vice versa? Do we need all the papers we had before if we go into radio? Are we using radio when we should be using newspapers, or vice versa? In short, are we setting forth our message where it will be assimilated and acted upon? How much of it fails to reach the chosen audience? Are we shooting wildly, or firing where the shots are bound to take effect?

We see numerous instances where direct mail is misguided simply because the mailing list is faulty or lacks revision. Mail is often sent to persons or companies who have gone out of business or transferred their interests to other fields. Frequently, we fail to direct our mail to the right person within an organization, with the result that the message goes astray. This not only means a loss of paper and postage; far greater than that, it means a loss in sales, with a resultant effect on the whole chain of distribution.

Full use should be made of all opportunities in advertising. We who are employed in transportation have in the motor truck a medium for advertising which is often overlooked. This does not neccessarily mean that we need to design a special poster for use on the sides. The truck itself, appropriately painted and neatly lettered with the name, location, and business of the user, becomes a valuable rolling billboard, often operating through neighborhoods where stationary billboards are not permitted.

IN the final analysis, all we have to deal with is time, time employed in the conversion of materials into finished products, time used to transfer such products from manufacturer to consumer, and time taken up in the use of such products. Any step which saves time is a step ahead in the field of distribution.

Personal Selling

Just as much attention should be given to the personal selling link in our distribution chain. The trend in selling is definitely to the visual presentation method by which the appeal is directed to the eye as well as the ear. Eye appeal is now well recognized as stronger and faster than ear appeal, and most companies have set up sales portfolios to make use of pictures, tables, graphs, and other aids to a quick understanding. This saves the time both of salesman and prospect.

In the final analysis, all we have to deal with is time, time employed in the conversion of materials into finished products, time used to transfer such products from manufacturer to consumer, and time taken up in the use of such products. Any step which saves time is a step ahead in the field of distribution.

Salesmen can save time by proper programing and routing of calls to eliminate unnecessary steps. By the same token, an efficient and well planned approach will save time.

WE find that high pressure sales methods of the past have been thrown out, and that the "I" or "We" attitude has been replaced by the "You" or service attitude. We are putting ourselves on the customer's side of the desk and discussing our products or services from the standpoint of his needs.

In the past, we lost a great deal of time between calls because of poor planning or lack of planning and because of slow transportation. Today, we are not only routing our calls more efficiently, but we are taking advantage of modern transportation. Salesmen can now go greater distances and can get there faster, thanks to the speed of the airplane, train, and automobile. Furthermore, the salesman is able to get his sleep and to be ready for his first morning call in fresh condition.

New Wages and Methods

In the future, we will apply the efficiency of production methods to selling, fewer salesmen may be required per unit of sale. Training in the past was half-hearted, partly due to slowness in accepting new methods.

The war not only disclosed many wasteful methods, but it brought about an acceptance of new ways and means of doing things. War training emphasized that men could be instructed rapidly by modern visual methods, and the men have learned to accept such methods. Thus they will favor efficient methods of instruction after the war. These men have witnessed the rapid training of maintenance men to keep the tanks, trucks, planes, and other equipment running. They have seen fliers trained quickly to handle $300,000 planes. The possibilities of our new educational methods are almost unlimited, and are already working in the commercial field.

THROUGH all avenues of distribution we have witnessed repeatedly the stimulation of advertising and selling by manufacturers, wholesalers, warehousemen, transportation agencies, retailers, and others, and have seen the wheels of distribution turn more rapidly as a result.

Looking back now, we recognize that selling has changed over the years just as products and processes have changed. Today, for instance, we find that high pressure methods of the past have been thrown out, and the "I" or "We" attitude has been replaced by the "You" or service attitude. In short, we are putting ourselves on the customer's side of the desk and discussing our products or services from the standpoint of his needs. Logical reasoning has replaced stubborn insistence.

In days gone by we sold products. Today, we sell ideas rather than products; we sell benefits and not merchandise. To put it another way, we sell the product of the product, its use in the consumer's hands.

Successful selling calls for a detailed knowledge of the needs of the prospect and an individual sales presentation based on those needs. No good sales engineer today would attempt to sell a machine tool, for instance, without first knowing the use, to which the prospect would put it.

Core-Thoughts

It is a foregone conclusion that the good salesman knows his product. Knowledge of product carries with it an understanding of how it operates under varying conditions, its ability and capacity in different applications, its maintenance requirements, and the many advantages it offers. With this well-rounded knowledge of his product, plus familiarity with his market, and practical tools to work with, the modern salesman is ready to go places.

Knowing the definite needs of our prospects in almost any field of selling cannot be overestimated. A prospect is interested in us and our products or services only in terms of what they can do for him. Formerly, we manufactured a product and asked buyers to adapt it as best they could to their own particular needs. Now we try to tailor our products or services to the specific needs of the user, and we tailor our sales presentation to the occasion.

Every product or service has its big central selling point or points, and these are treated as the core-thought of our sales presentations, applying the lesser features in a supporting vein. In this way the prospect's mind is not allowed to be cluttered up by unnecessary details or information in which he has little interest. In some cases exploratory work is done during the sales discussion to pin down the chief interests of the prospect, but more often these interests are determined in advance.

Distribution Worldwide

● Because of European nations' strivings after the war to regain their foreign trade, retention of U. S. foreign trade, following satiation of first flush of postwar business, will require first-rate salesmanship.

—W. D. Gephart
Vice President
First National Bank, St. Louis

Balance of Exports and Imports Vital For Postwar Prosperity, Mfrs. Told

Discussing problems due to arise in the restoration of normal business and commercial relations between the United States and the rest of the world when the war ends, Charles P. Taft, director, Wartime Economic Affairs, State Department, Washington, D. C., in a talk before a group of Los Angeles manufacturers and exporters recently warned that foreign trade will not take up the entire slack left by the reconversion of business to peacetime operations.

Mr. Taft declared that 10 per cent is a rough average of the relation of foreign trade to total trade, with many important items running far higher.

"I do not like the emphasis on exports in all our talk about foreign trade, he said. "It was not exports by themselves that built our foreign trade."

Mr. Taft emphasized that American businessmen must use equal ingenuity in finding merchandise to buy in foreign lands for sale in the United States as they exercise in exporting American-made goods for sale in foreign countries.

"If you can buy it in China and sell it in Australia and get something there you can import to America, all the better," Mr. Taft said. "Look for something we need in the United States, bring it in and let such items pay for our exports via the usual exchange mechanism.

"Let us spend just as much time finding out what these other nations beyond the setting sun have, that we want or would like to have, as we do in figuring out what they want," he said. "That goes even for makers of things we can export, for they will have a bad time for quite a number of years to come, figuring ways for their customers to pay them. We are a creditor nation now, and other people do not have much in the way of dollars to pay us with."

Summarizing, Mr. Taft said: "It seems to me we need a revival of the genius, enterprise and ingenuity in foreign trade associated with the term 'Yankee'."

He pointed out that the government's function is to help, through agencies concerned with foreign trade, under the co-ordination of the State Department and the Foreign Service, but that, if private enterprise means anything, it means the job of obtaining and creating foreign trade must be done . . . without spoon feeding by a government agency." (Herr).

Foreign Trade Statistics for '44

Value of U. S. exports total domestic, foreign merchandise (including lend-lease), in thousands of dollars as compiled by Bureau of Census, Department of Commerce, for the first 10 months of 1944 increased from 1,090,229 (Jan.) to 1,137,769 (Oct.). In the comparative 1943 period, figures were 730,498 (Jan.), 1,194,972 (Oct.).

Domestic 1944 merchandise (lend-lease included) is estimated at 1,081,539 (Jan.) and 1,132,484 (Oct.); for 1943, 722,313 (Jan.) and 1,187,250 (Oct.).

Value of U. S. merchandise imports are listed as follows:

General, 1944: Jan., 300,122 and Oct., 327,178; 1943: Jan., 228,878 and Oct., 329,168.

Imports for consumption, 1944: Jan., 304,569, and Oct., 330,278; 1943: Jan., 246,240, and Oct., 317,293.

Export Service

Judson Sheldon Corp., New York, foreign freight forwarders, freight brokers and contractors-customs brokers, has opened a Southern California office, 125 S. Santa Fe Ave. It specializes in the handling of export documents at New York and New Orleans, and operates frequent consolidated export car service from Los Angeles to Mobile, Ala., New York and New Orleans. (Herr.)

Export Pools Asked To Defeat Cartels

Maury Maverick, chairman, Smaller War Plants Corp., declared at a press conference in Washington shortly after his return from England, that he is vigorously opposed to cartels but at the same time "if it takes an amendment to the Webb-Pomerene Act to permit it, such an amendment should be enacted by Congress," so that "some sort of pools, through which small enterprises will be able to get their products into foreign markets," may be organized.

"I don't know exactly the best method, but I do know that small business must be enabled to compete with big business in foreign trade. I'd prefer such pools to operate under private leadership . . ."

Trade with China Expected to Gain

Trade with China will be considerably larger after the war, according to William L. Montgomery, managing director, San Francisco office, China-America Council of Commerce and Industry.

Mr. Montgomery warned recently that there is no way of estimating what effect the abolition of extra-territorial rights in China will have. He declared that the rights of shipping and trade agencies in Chinese ports and tax problems are still in doubt. (Herr).

National Planning Assn. Outlines Program For Realizing Future Trade Opportunities

In advising a "complete reversal" of the American attitude on imports in order that the U. S. make the most of its trade opportunities after the war and fulfill its obligations as the world's principal creditor nation, the National Planning Assn. has recommended removal of restrictions on foreign loans; support of a proposed International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (with enlarged lending power, if possible), and expansion of the foreign credit powers of both the Export-Import Bank and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

It has also recommended creation of a foreign investment commission comprising representatives of interested Government agencies, which would relate its programs to those of the International Bank, and has called for "a responsible part" for this country "in establishing an adequate international exchange stabilization mechanism.

"The crux of the United States foreign trade problem is this," the committee said: "How can other nations be provided with dollar exchange to buy American goods and to pay for American capital invested abroad? This problem arises because of the disparity between foreign demand for American goods and capital and America's demand for foreign goods."

Pointing out that despite the fact that in the last 30 years this country has changed from a debtor to the leading creditor nation, the committee said "we cling basically to the foreign trade and investment policies of our non-industrial and debtor period.

In New York Central Railroad Co. v. Beacon Milling Co. 56 N. E. (2d) 558, N. Y., the higher court held that a common carrier dissatisfied or aggrieved by emergency freight rates fixed and published by the Interstate Commerce Commission, must sue the commission first before suing in a state court to recover the higher freight charges to which the carrier believes it is entitled.

In Katapodis v. La Salle Trucking Corp., 56 N. E. (2d) 562, N. Y., it was shown that a child was killed by a motor truck when it was backed across a public sidewalk. The question presented the court was whether it was the duty of the land owner or the truck company's employe to protect pedestrians on the sidewalk. The higher court held that this duty was with the driver of the truck. Therefore, the higher court held the trucking company liable in damages for death of the child.

In Thomson v. Iowa State Commerce Commission (H. & W. Motor Express Co.), 15 N. W. (2d) 611, Ia., the higher court held a decision rendered by a Public Service Commission is void if the testimony disclosed that the commission was arbitrary or unreasonable and the decision was not based on standards prescribed by the state legislature.

In this case the commission denied a common carrier's application for a certificate of public convenience and necessity to operate as a motor carrier of freight over specified routes. The higher court reversed the verdict and allowed the application since the evidence established that the proposed new service would be beneficial and was reasonably necessary to the public welfare and could not be furnished by existing motor carriers.

Modern courts consistently hold that in determining whether or not to issue a certificate of public convenience and necessity a Public Service Commission exercises an administrative or legislative function, as distinguished from a judicial function. An appeal from its decision will be set aside, if it acted in excess of its jurisdiction, or if its order is without support in the record, or is arbitrary and unreasonable.

See late case of Iowa State Commerce Commission Motor Express Co., 15 N. W. (2d) 603, Ia., where the Chicago and North Western Railway Co. filed an application with the Iowa State Commerce Commission for a certificate of public convenience and necessity to operate as a motor carrier of freight over ten specified routes between fixed termini. Public hearings were held following which the application was denied by a written decision of the Public Service Commission. The railway company appealed to the higher court.

During the trial on the application proposed, in which the railroad would substantially parallel its existing lines with motor transportation, 72 witnesses from 31 points testified that the service would be beneficial to them as shippers or receivers of freight, in addition to which 17 letters from various places, 4 telegrams and 11 petitions which had signatures from 165 places and resolutions from 5 civic bodies supported the application. On the other hand, nearly all existing motor carriers resisted the application asserting that what is proposed can be accomplished by those now holding operating rights.

The higher court reversed the Public Service Commission and held in favor of the application. This court said:

"Of course, the decisions of the Interstate Commerce Commission are not binding precedents upon this court. . . . The testimony of the railroad's witnesses was that no satisfactory arrangement had been worked out and that none was possible because so many conflicting details in the operations of so many systems made proper coordination impossible."

Also, see Mid-States Freight Lines, Inc., v. United States, 56 F. Supp. 20, Kan., where the higher court held that the "grandfather clause" of the Motor Carrier Act extends only to carriers who are plainly within its terms.

In Employers Group of Motor Freight Carriers, Inc., v. National War Labor Board, 143 Fed. R. (2d) 145, the litigation involved the legal right of an employer to avoid payment of certain penalties.

In this case it was shown that the Inflation Control Act provides that no employer shall pay wages in contravention of the regulations promulgated by the President. The regulations promulgated by the President forbids the adoption, without approval of National War Labor Board, of a new wage scale. However, neither the Executive Order nor any regulation forbids adherence to an old wage scale after the board approves a new one. Therefore, the higher court held that employers, by declining to adopt a new scale approved by the board, are not subject to any penalties.

In Micieli v. Erie Co., 37 Atl. (2d) 123, N. J., it was shown that an employer furnished an employe transportation to and from work. The employe was killed while attempting to alight from a vehicle on which he was riding home. The higher court held the dependents of the employe entitled to recover compensation since the death was one "arising out of and in the course of his employment."

In Acco Transport Co. v. Smith, 178 S. W. (2d) 1011, Ark., the higher court allowed a wagon driver $5,000 damages for injuries sustained when his wagon was struck by a transportation company's motor truck. This court said that whether the horse drawn wagon veered to the left or whether the truck driver was negligent was for jury, which held that the truck driver was negligent.

In Anderson v. Contract Trucking Co., Inc., 146 Pac. (2d) 873, N. M., the higher court held that under a state

Liability for Damage by Vermin

Question: Recently the U. S. Pure Food and Drug Inspector seized quite a large consignment of merchandise in bags. The reason given for seizure was that the bags had small holes cut by mice. The Inspector claimed that the merchandise was unfit for human consumption because of fact the mice cut through the bags.

We have for years used the services of a professional exterminating company to exterminate rats and mice in our building. The company employes made weekly trips to our warehouse, using poison and also gases to exterminate rats, mice, etc.

Our customers who own the merchandise seized contend that we are liable and are holding us responsible entirely. Will you please give us your opinion? Post Warehouse Co.

Answer: A warehouseman is not liable for losses of this nature if the testimony indicates that the warehouseman used "ordinary" care to protect the stored merchandise from damage. Therefore, if the extermination company, which you employed, is known to be reasonably efficient and experienced, it is my opinion that you exercised "ordinary" care to safeguard this merchandise from damage and, therefore, you should not be held liable.

Of course, if the owner of the damaged merchandise is successful in proving that the contract which you had with the exterminating company is such that reasonably prudent persons would not expect this company to exterminate mice, then, under these circumstances, the jury may hold you liable. In other words, the problem to be solved by the court is whether you used the same degree of care to protect this merchandise as would have been used by a reasonably careful owner of the same quality of goods

Pallet Pools Offer Public Warehouses New Service Opportunities

After the war, between one and three million surplus pallets may be disposed of by the government. Commercial shipments of palletized unit loads are expected to become common. Some pooling method for collecting pallets and re-distributing them to industry is likely to be developed. The logical organization to provide this service is the public warehouse. It has the necessary transportation, packing and storage facilities. Now is the time for public warehousemen to prepare to secure this profitable business.

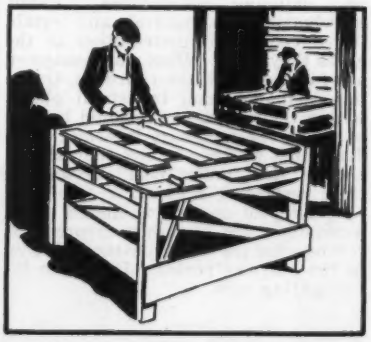
By MATTHEW W. POTTS
Materials Handling Editor

IN February, 1941, the writer addressed the 50th annual meeting of the American Warehousemen's Assn., and discussed materials handling, particularly the matter of pallets. It was suggested that warehousemen get together and develop a standard pallet size most suitable for the commercial warehouse field, and that they prepare for the handling and storing of palletized unit loads.

Apparently, nothing was done to follow up this suggestion. When the impact of war struck in December, 1941, the armed services became the greatest warehouse operators in the world.

Army Developments

The first group to take the initial step in warehouse handling and storage methods, was the Office of The Quartermaster General, Field Operations Branch of the Storage Division. The preliminary work of establishing methods, for the most part, was under the direction of men who were not familiar with the details of materials handling methods, and they had to depend upon the advice of equipment manufacturers, which, in many cases, was not always of an unbiased nature.



The bottom deck of the pallet can be nailed on evenly with the guidance of the jig sides. The 8½ in. gaps are spaced with a wooden gage carried in the worker's apron. Most public warehouses have adequate facilities or can develop them for pallet maintenance service.

They were faced also with the responsibility of getting methods and equipment into operation so as to obtain quick results. One manufacturer was able to make quantity deliveries on a fork truck with a load capacity of 2000 lb. Consequently, the system was predicated on this particular truck, with the result that the pallet of the Quartermaster Corps was made to fit that truck-load capacity. Hence, we have a standard Quartermaster pallet which is 32 in. long and 40 in. wide. A million or more of these were procured within a year, and placed in service throughout the country, and additional millions have been procured since then.

Since the Quartermaster at that time operated all of the General Depots, the 32 x 40-in. pallet was used by the Engineers, Ordnance, Signal Corps, and other service branches, and the Quartermaster also procured for those branches pallets 36 x 50 in., 42 x 48 in., 48 x 48 in., 42 x 72 in. and 42 x 56 in. These larger pallets were for use with fork trucks with capacities from 4000 lb. to 10,000 lb.

As the manufacturers of fork trucks increased their production, the Quartermaster General procured the larger trucks for all services, and the use of larger pallets than the Quartermaster's standard 32 x 40 in. became more common.

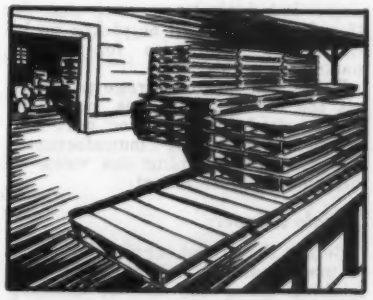
The public warehousing industry has the necessary transportation, storage and packing facilities for handling pallet pool distribution.

The Navy, through the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, started its materials handling program in 1942. By the time it was ready to procure fork trucks, the manufacturers were in quantity production, so the Navy bought very few 2000 lb. fork trucks and obtained more of the larger type, even 15,000 lb. units. For this reason, it standardized on the 48 x 48 in. pallet for inter-depot and overseas shipment, and for intra-depot movements on the 42 x 66-in. pallet.

Here again, they procured, not thousands, but millions of these pallets which are distributed throughout all the states of the union, and to many of the advance bases, to Australia, India, Iceland and Europe. We hope we'll soon be shipping palletized unit loads into Japan itself.

Postwar Surplus Pallets

However, because of this large use of pallets by the various branches of the armed services, there will come a time when they will not be required for the storing of supplies, and they will be classed as "surplus materials for disposal" with the result that possibly somewhere between one million to three million pallets will be disposed of by the government. The largest volume will be in the 32 x 40 in., 48 x 48 in. and the 42 x 56 in.



If the more expensive and well-built pallets are used it will not be economical to scrap them. Consequently, it will be necessary to develop some pooling method so that these pallets can be collected in certain areas for re-distribution to industry as needed.

Outstanding and Constructive

ONCE again Matthew W. Potts has come up with a constructive and germinal idea of conspicuous merit. His record in this respect has been outstanding. For example:

He coined the phrase "Palletized unit loads" in his articles in D and W.

In the January, 1941, issue, he asked "Are Palletized Shipments Possible?" It has been proven that they are.

In the February, 1941, issue, the article "Coordination Leads to Progress" pointed out the way to cooperation and worked to promote and foster the idea of palletized unit load shipments.

In February, 1941, at the 50th annual meeting of the American Warehousemen's Assn., Mr. Potts pointed out to warehousemen that they should act to standardize pallets before someone else did it for them. The warehousemen missed this opportunity, and now are faced with standards developed by the Army and Navy.

The work of D and W's materials handling editor, as Materials Handling Coordinator for the Office of the Quartermaster General of the U. S. Army did much to establish the use of the pallet system of handling in Army warehouses throughout this country and abroad. His work as technical consultant with the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts of the U. S. Navy has done much to promote the use of this system in naval operations.

Another article in D and W in November, 1941, entitled "The Unit Load Principle," by C. H. Barker, Jr., inspired by Mr. Potts, also stressed the progress being made by this method of handling.

In the August, 1942, issue, Mr. Potts wrote an article entitled "Shipment by Palletized Unit Loads a Reality," and since that time, additional progress has been made in this field.

In the January, 1943, issue, Mr. Potts again described shipments of palletized unit loads in connection with his work as materials handling coordinator for the quartermaster General.

Many other articles have appeared on the same or related subjects, but these mentioned have been outstanding and constructive contributions in this field.—The Editor.

sizes. It is logical to assume that the 42 x 66 in. sizes will be picked up by stevedoring companies for use in marine terminals, etc.

These will be for storage purposes, but the other pallet sizes, no doubt, will be used for palletized unit load shipments by many manufacturers who are now learning the value of this method of shipment.

"Single Shippers"

Before the armed services procured so many pallets, industry had been thinking along the line of building pallets of light cheap construction to be called "single shippers," that is, they would carry one load and then be discarded as scrap lumber. Of course, it is better to have a good pallet, and use it over and over again, not only for inter-plant shipment, but also for handling several operations within the plant.

If the government surplus in pallets amounted only to a few hundred thousand they would be quickly bought up by industrial plants for use within their own plant areas, but since the quantity that will be surplus material, is large, and the price should be low, it is logical to assume that the cheap "single shipper" type of pallet will not be developed. Instead, industry is likely to absorb the surplus pallets.

Pallet Pools

If the more expensive and well-built pallets are used it will not be economical to scrap them. Consequently, it will be necessary to develop some pooling method so that these pallets can be collected in certain areas for re-distribution to industry as needed.

This will require an organization equipped with trucking facilities to pick up the pallets or deliver them, as required, and also with the necessary equipment for repairing and maintaining the pallets, with sufficient storage space to carry a large quantity for immediate demand requirements.

Warehousemen's Opportunity

The logical organization to provide this service is a public warehouse. Both merchandise and household goods warehouses are equipped with packing departments, and after the war should have the available labor and machinery for maintenance and repair of pallets. They have the necessary transportation facilities, and are known in their local communities.

In the past, warehouses have supplied packing cases for their own use and the use of others, and the same is true regarding barrels for packing. These were not always new, but quite frequently were used items that had been sold more than once. The warehousing industry probably cannot act as a unit in connection with this pallet pool idea. In all likelihood, it will be more feasible for individual operators in selected areas, where the demand for pallets will be greatest, to go to work on it separately.

For this reason, the warehouseman should become conversant with the types and sizes of pallets that are available, and know their best use for a wide variety of operations.

This important subject of pallets and palletized unit load shipments has been covered by DandW in a number of articles in the past three years. We will continue to present fresh aspects of it in the future. How soon the government will offer surplus pallets for sale is not known. How they will be disposed of has not as yet been planned.

However, this should not prevent any progressive warehouseman from giving it consideration and getting prepared to take advantage of the opportunity when it is presented.

Suggested Surveys

It might be well to start an initial survey in certain localities to find out what sizes can be used, the quantities that may be required, the potential number of outlets in a given area, etc., rather than to wait until the pallets are offered, and then try to acquire the information while someone else is acquiring the pallets.

More than ever, warehousemen are going to require pallets for storing and shipping commodities. Public warehouses are natural and established centers of distribution in the areas they serve. Most warehousemen are familiar with the railroads, trucking companies and industrial plants within their areas, and should be able to secure the necessary information to determine whether or not they should become the "pallet pool" centers in their respective regions.

Pallet pool operations should prove profitable and another source of revenue for the warehousing industry in the postwar period. Its worth investigating now.

What Does a Traffic Department Do?

Wide in scope, varied in action, the work of a general traffic department spreads all the way from tracing freight shipments to controlling costs of transportation as related to production and sales, and on into the field of distribution in its broadest sphere.

By HENRY G. ELWELL
Traffic Consultant

INDUSTRIAL executives, in general, realize that they have very hazy notions on traffic management, although the questions they ask indicate they are becoming more and more interested in the subject.

Here is a typical instance: only a short time ago at a luncheon-meeting the president of a manufacturing establishment asked the writer, "What is the work of a general traffic department?"

Wide in scope, varied in action. Well, the work of a general traffic department is wide in scope and varied in action. It spreads all the way from tracing freight shipments to controlling costs of transportation as related to production and sales and on into the field of distribution in its broadest sphere.

The department's activities embrace the directing of the movement of materials and products received and shipped by any means of transportation, including railroad, water carrier, highway carrier, airway carrier, express or mail, both domestic and foreign.

Five major functions. Broadly, the department has a hand in more than 60 operations which make up five major functions, namely:

A—Consultive.
B—Research.
C—Administrative.
D—Operating.
E—Practice before regulatory bodies.

It would be impracticable to list herein each of the operations making up these five major functions. At any rate they include the study of distribution methods and costs; carloading and bracing studies; analyzing new locations for plants and warehouses; negotiating with carriers regarding agreements relating to demurrage, credits, transit, weighing, and side tracks; preparing data for appearance before the Interstate Commerce Commission, etc.

Specific examples. To more clearly define the nature of the work performed, reference is now made to some of the jobs actually handled during one day in a certain general traffic department.

These illustrations point to the purpose of traffic functions. Moreover, they demonstrate that such matters cannot be successfully guided by any department other than a general traffic department. Further, they disclose, to some slight extent, the many technical problems which must be correctly administered to protect the interests of a shipper consignee.

Inasmuch as a large measure of the transactions of a general traffic department is governed by regulation based on the Interstate Commerce Act and court interpretations, thereby requiring compliance with laws bearing on transportation, citations of the courts and of the Interstate Commerce Commission are included with each of the following examples. These citations prove how definitely the interstate movement of goods is subject to regulatory rules.

Among the daily operations taken at random, are:

1. Freight routes: The selecting of routes for less than carload and carload shipments. "The shippers and not the carriers possess the right to designate the routing of traffic." (98 ICC 119.) (See also article on this subject in DandW, July, 1944, p. 71.)

2. Freight classification: The compiling of freight classification descriptions to provide for legal designation of commodities in bills of lading, and to avoid improper freight charges. "Classification is the foundation of all rate making." (1 ICC 254.) "Classification is an art or science in itself." (25 ICC 442.) "Classification is a means of arriving at a rate." (13 ICC 465.)

3. Freight rates: The listing of freight rates from railroad and truck tariffs for use by the purchasing and sales departments. "Shippers are charged with notice of the lawful rate and they as well as the carrier must abide by it." (237 U. S. 94, 59 L. ed 853, 35 Sup. Ct. Rep. 494.)

4. Checking freight bills: The checking of carriers' freight bills for correct freight rates, etc., prior to payment by shipper/consignee. This checking means determining the published rates which may be different from those specified in the freight bills. "The phrase 'overcharge' embraces cases where carriers have demanded and (or) received a rate in excess of the published rate." (17 ICC 330). "It is the duty of the delivering carrier to collect the amount of the undercharges." (25 ICC 442). "The carrier is required to collect and the shipper to pay the full charges named in the tariffs." (25 Fed. 2d 66.)

5. Demurrage control: The assisting in undertakings linked with loading and unloading of freight cars, thus helping to prevent demurrage charges, and increase efficiency. "A shipper has no inherent right to detain a car beyond the free time and thus prevent it from being used for transportation by other shippers." (66 ICC 393.)

6. Stop-off-privilege: The tabulating of routes, etc. for stop-off-in-transit for unloading commodities at warehouses. "Transit arrangements for unloading . . . are conducive to heavier loading and results in more economical transportation provided a reasonable charge is made for the extra service." (91 ICC 235.) "Stoppage in transit to partially unload carload shipments should not be available to shippers where a back-haul or unduly circuitous out-of-line haul is required." (120 ICC 305.)

7. Various transit privileges: The obtaining of transit privileges (such as milling-in-transit), and the maintaining of records and the preparing of inspection reports, etc. Of all traffic factors those belonging to transit privileges are the most complicated. "Records and reports required to be kept and made, are necessary to make effective the kind-for-kind rule." (36 ICC 657.) "Ordinarily transit can only be accorded products which move at the same or very nearly the same rates as the material from which they were made." (10 ICC 193.)

8. Loss/damage claims: The preparation and presentation of loss and damage claims to carriers. "Commission's jurisdiction does not extend to loss and damage claims." (225 ICC 288.) "An action for loss or damage to an interstate shipment of goods through the negligence of the carrier arises at common law, and is not arising under 'any law regulating com-

Together they offer the answer to highest efficiency and lowest cost in the movement of materials.

G-E copper-oxide battery chargers are designed to meet the exacting charging requirements of all makes of large industrial electric truck batteries as well as the smaller requirements of batteries used in motorized hand trucks. G-E chargers for lead or nickel batteries or G-E combination chargers to accommodate both are fully automatic and easy to use. Spotted at strategic locations they're always ready to deliver an initial high charging rate which reduces to a safe finishing rate and cuts off automatically at end of charge.

Common Carrier Conference Considers Many Controversial Issues

By H. H. SLAWSON

IN marked contrast to the continued refusal of the railroads to cooperate with motor carriers, leaders in air cargo development are showing a commendable spirit of cooperation toward truckers, Ted V. Rodgers, president of American Trucking Assns., Inc., declared at the recent Common Carrier Conference of the Association in Chicago.

Representatives of the motor carriers have already held preliminary meetings with air industry leaders, Mr. Rodgers said, to map out plans for coordination of air-ground services. This cooperation, he declared, reflects a commendable regard for the public interest.

Examining the possible effect of air cargo development on other types of transportation, Mr. Rodgers expressed doubt that any large volume of traffic would ever be shifted either from the rails or trucks to air transport. With respect to truck traffic, he said this would be particularly true on the shorter hauls where trucks are able to give over-night service.

In the postwar era, he said he believed there will be an immediate, though limited field for air cargo in movement of relatively high-value freight over relatively long distances. "The extent of air cargo's expansion beyond that field," he added, "will depend in large measure upon success of its continued and relentless fight against high cost of operations and ingenuity in developing entirely new business."

Summing up his examination of the relative position of trucks in the postwar transportation picture, he declared that, "It will be substantially the same as it was before the war, with an excellent prospect for resumption of normal growth and development."

Speaking further on the relations between air and motor carriers, later in the two-day Chicago conference, Chester G. Moore, secretary, ATA, and chairman of the board, Central Motor Freight Assn., Chicago, declared that, while no one knows to what extent air cargo may go, it may become "tremendous." It would be "silly," Moore said, "not to go along at the start, even if there is not much business in it." By cooperating now, he declared, motor carriers would be in position to take full advantage of the larger opportunities when they come.

Referring to the "integration" program of the Transportation Assn. of America, Mr. Moore stated that the airlines have taken the same position as the motor trucking industry in opposition to the proposal for building a huge transportation monopoly controlled by railroad interests.

"We need the help of the air lines on this," he said. "They need ours and it should be forthcoming."

o o o

Reporting on the most recent Washington conference between air and motor carrier leaders, Mr. Moore outlined discussions there of provisions of the Civil Aeronautics Act covering joint rates in combined air-truck movements. The Act's requirement of a joint board, composed of representatives of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Aeronautics Board, to regulate the rates, he said, is "ponderous but workable." He also discussed other possibilities of avoiding the need for this additional regulation of the two transport agencies by still another board.

Air cargo was not, however, the only topic discussed at the Chicago conference of midwestern truck operators. The industry's revenue problems, labor relations, pending legislative measures, safety programs, claim prevention, sales promotion and other grave matters affecting the industry's welfare, all received thorough attention.

No shipper, Mr. Moore asserted, wants truck operators to lose money on the business they handle for him, since it means ultimate failure of the service. He told of the carriers' repeated efforts to raise rates to a point comparable to handling costs and of equally repeated failure to get anywhere because of Interstate Commerce Commission rulings that "you can't do it that way."

Referring to one effort to get increased rates on specific commodities handled in less truckload lots, he said, the OPA had not objected, but that the Commission had decreed that "when additional revenue is needed, you must make a horizontal raise." This situation he compared with that of a grocer who might want to raise his price on flour because its sale was unprofitable at the prevailing price. The Commission ruling, he said, if applied to the grocer, would mean that he would have to raise his price on sugar, too, although his sugar business might not need the raise. This ICC decision, Mr. Moore said, will be appealed.

Pres. Rodgers, in his talk, sketched the history of the rate war waged by the railroads against the trucks. The showdown, he predicted, will come when the Germans and Japs are smashed. "There is going to be lively competition," he remarked, "and we can assume that the railroads will pick up where they left off in 1940."

The function of the ICC, he declared, is to foster healthy competition and stamp out destructive competition. "Since we are being frank today," he went on, "I must say that many of us in this industry feel that the Commission on some occasions has displayed faulty judgment in fulfilling that function and duty. . . . If the Commission, in the class rate investigation and other pending cases, will act to stop the ruinous rate cutting activity that prevailed prior to the war, we have nothing to fear."

Reviewing the industry's legal problems, Jack Garrett Scott, counsel for ATA's Common Carrier Conference, formerly associated with the Office of Defense Transportation, told of efforts to arrive at a sound legal basis for differentiating between common and contract carriers which will be applicable under all circumstances. More legislation, he suggested, may be needed to settle the controversy. Meanwhile, he said, it is necessary to see that "no backward steps are taken and that the Commission's decisions are sound and progressive."

Another problem he talked of, concerns the extent to which, "if at all," the railroads should be permitted to engage in over-the-road motor carrier operations and, if so, under what restrictions and limitations, to carry out the intent of the legislation. The Common Carrier Conference, he stated, has set out to determine the limitations and to see that railroad motor carriers comply with them.

Frank Purse, Chicago district director, Bureau of Motor Carriers, ICC, in discussing the subject, "Are the Motor Carriers Complying with ICC Regulations?" took occasion to refer to the unsatisfactory procedures followed by many carriers in making settlement for loss and damage claims. The Commission, he ad-

Allied Van Lines Wins ICC Permit

Allied Van Lines, Inc., through a ruling of the Interstate Commerce Commission, has been granted permission to operate as a motor common carrier of household goods between all points in the United States, over irregular routes. This represents a major victory for Allied in the campaign it has waged for almost nine years to obtain operating rights and designation as a common carrier.

Opposed to Allied were the Independent Movers and Warehousemen's Assn., household goods moving and storage concerns, and the Department of Justice. Much of the opinion dealt with different types of service rendered and the status of Allied in relation to those services.

Proposed Regulations Issued by CRC Governing Household Goods Carriers

PROPOSED regulations have been issued by the California Railroad Commission to govern household goods carriers' practices of placing shipments in storage, estimating payment of commissions, insurance coverage and dual operations of affiliated carriers.

Prepared by J. H. Bean, the CRC's associate transportation rate authority, the proposal condemns the present practice of estimating, stating that to the extent that a substantial difference occurs between the estimate and actual cost of transportation, dissatisfaction becomes the order of the day and shipper-carrier relations suffer.

Mr. Bean conceded that the shippers should be afforded some means of determining for themselves the approximate cost of transportation and recommended that, with respect to long distance hauling, carriers be required to make available to shippers on request a form of check-sheet from which the shippers themselves may determine the estimated cost involved.

Payment of commission was treated under two general categories in the Bean recommendations; the first being payments made to real estate agents and others outside of the household goods carrying business, and the second being payments made to carriers for turning over business to other carriers.

The CRC rate expert expressed the opinion that commissions place an undue and unnecessary burden on transportation charges and on shippers who pay such charges. He concluded that real estate agents perform no service warranting compensation, and similarly concluded that a carrier who simply turns over business to another carrier likewise is entitled to no compensation. He recommended that the carriers be prohibited from paying commissions in any form or manner.

Under the subject "Placing Shipments in Storage," the Bean report cited instances where, in the case of long-distance moving operations, original arrangements are not carried out for one reason or another, delivery cannot be accomplished as planned, and the customer is called on to pay an additional charge for the service of storing goods awaiting disposition orders.

Mr. Bean recommended in his report that the shipping order, bill of lading or freight bill show the arrangement for disposition of the shipment at destination and that the freight bill heretofore prescribed by the CRC be modified accordingly. He recommended, further, that the carriers be required to absorb all additional expense resulting from nondelivery except where the shipper fails to receive the property when tendered for delivery on the date scheduled, or to furnish further disposition instructions.

The report recommended that in all instances carriers issuing insurance coverage should be required to furnish the shippers purchasing such coverage with a certificate of insurance or a copy of the insurance policy itself in advance of transportation; and that premiums collected for insurance coverage be neither more nor less than the amount of premium charged by the insurance company.

The Bean report dealt at length with dual operations, such as operations in which a company or affiliated firms hold both a highway common carrier's certificate under the State Public Utilities Act, and a radial common carrier's permit under the State Highway Carriers Act. The report pointed out that the affiliated carriers who hold radial operating rights function not only outside of the territory served by the common carriers but also within the territory as well.

Mr. Bean recommended that the CRC prohibit the use of bills of lading, freight bills, estimating sheets and any other document bearing the name of an issuing carrier other than the carrier which, in fact, participated in the transportation; and that the CRC require complete records of transferred equipment and separation of all affiliated companies' accounts, including a record of the time devoted to the affairs of each company in the case of the use of an employee working for a firm holding both forms of carrier certificates. He also recommended that restrictions be applied to prevent overlapping operations. (Herr)

Tire Requirements Cut For First Quarter

Present indications are that commercial motor vehicle operators will receive only about one-half of their estimated tire requirements during the first quarter of 1945, Col. J. Monroe Johnson, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, announced last month. The urgent military demand for tires for combat vehicles, trucks, jeeps and other military transport was given as the reason for the drastic cut.

Commenting on the expected reduction, Colonel Johnson declared the tire situation "presents a challenge to all truck, bus and taxi operators to make the greatest effort possible to continue and to step up their tire conservation activities."

Common Carrier Conference

mitted, has no jurisdiction. He warned, however, that shippers are beginning to consider this their No. 1 problem in their dealings with motor carriers.

"Unless a real effort is made, to cut out this cancerous condition," Mr. Purse said, "public opinion will become the real regulator and this is bound to affect your industry. Don't overlook that."

Prosecutions have been instituted against carriers who fail to remit C.O.D. money promptly, Mr. Purse revealed. He also told of the difficulties piling up on carriers who overlook the requirement that they turn in to the ICC certain accident reports, and on others who violate the hours-of-service regulations, and on still others charged with falsification of log.

Col. Dan A. Hardt, commanding officer, 6th Zone Transportation Corps, Chicago, shocked the truckers with the charge that they are not doing so well in furthering the war effort. Shippers, he said, have filed many complaints of unusual delays on motor truck shipments of war materiel. From Milwaukee to Chicago, a distance of 80 miles, shipments have averaged 4 days, he reported. From Cleveland to Chicago time in transit has averaged 5 days and from one point in Ohio to Chicago 12 days.

Since many carriers are giving better service, the trouble cannot be wholly a matter of manpower and equipment and can be corrected, he asserted. He urged "careful and constant supervision of detail by the boss himself. You have no more important job at this time."

WLB's recent ruling in the steel case, on the "night differential" and the 2-weeks vacation claim of steel workers, will create a serious problem for truckers, said Earl N. Cannon, vice president of ATA and industry representative on the Trucking Commission to the War Labor Board. Also soon to face truck operators, he said, will be the "bonus" problem, created by union demands for additional driver compensation because of ODT's 35 m.p.h. speed limitation rule. Carrier efforts to obtain necessary manpower through voluntary raises is a practice which, he warned, "labor is going to use against you."

Truckers can look forward to seeing considerable legislation affecting their interests being introduced into the next Congress, John V. Lawrence, managing director, ATA, told the conference, among them, it is anticipated, will be bills relating to the "integration" program of the Transportation Assn. of America. This issue, he said, will go on for years, adding, "When we call on you, we hope you will roll up your sleeves and wade in."

A continual rise in the industry's wage levels appears inevitable, Mr. Lawrence pointed out. To offset increased labor costs he proposed closer attention to improvement of employe relations and the building of morale as a means for encouraging improvement of quality and volume of work done.

That the postwar truck will be marketed on a more nearly functional basis than ever before was the prediction of Fred B. Lautzenheiser, consulting engineer, International Harvester Co., Chicago. He derided the many currently circulated conceptions of the postwar truck," powered by a radio beam, braked by wishful thinking and steered by mental telepathy."

The immediate postwar truck, generally speaking, he said, will "very likely continue to look pretty much like and incorporate pretty much the same specifications as the WPB-authorized current - production vehicles, which are yet basically the 1942 models."

As long as present state barriers, in the form of non-uniformity of size and weight laws exist among the states, he also declared, truck designers cannot take advantage of wartime experiences to "really fit the truck to the job."

New trailers will not emerge overnight "to everybody's surprise," V. M. Drew, director of research, Fruehauf Trailer Co., assured the conference. He discussed in detail technological advances in materials which promise for the postwar period a lighter, stronger, more serviceable trailer. Viewing the development of frozen foods, he declared the time is at hand for trailer men to approach transportation men in that field with a complete, built-in refrigerating unit.

Government estimates indicate that within the next five years trucks will be hauling 80 billion ton-miles of traffic, he said, and, if correct, this would call for 5½ to 6 million trucks in daily service on the highways by 1947 or 1948. This, he declared, would make the industry more indispensable than ever before. Fruehauf, he said, is "thinking on the basis of tremendous expansion."

The conference also heard an interesting exposition of the possible uses for two-way radio communication in truck operations, by D. C. Noble, of Galvin Mfg. Co., Chicago, and chairman of Panel 13, Radio Planning Board, Federal Communications Commission. Summed up, his discussions indicated that for its proposed purposes in this field, "radio has its limitations, although within the range for which the equipment is designed, it will give satisfactory service."

Ink Sales Termed Trade Barometer

Exports of American-made printing inks to Latin American countries are steadily increasing in volume, according to Otto T. Kreuser, second vice president, Chase National Bank, New York City.

Besides being highly favorable for future trade relations between the two countries, Mr. Kreuser held that this gradually swelling consumption indicates people are reading more books and newspapers. As literacy increases, living standards will be raised creating demands for modern articles of commerce, which can be supplied by American business enterprise, he said. (Slawson).

Subsidiary

A new industrial research and development organization, the Pyrene Development Corp., Newark, N. J., has been formed as a subsidiary of the Pyrene Mfg. Co., also of Newark, maker of fire extinguishing equipment and automobile tire chains.

The officers of the new organization, drawn from the executives and directors of the parent company, are Charles G. Durfee, president; Edward J. Waring, vice-president, and Edward A. Clapp, secretary and treasurer.

Waterways and Terminals . . .

Outlook for Water Carriers

A very favorable physical and financial outlook in the immediate future is foreseen for domestic carriers by water, but a policy of conservatism is recommended.

DOMESTIC water transportation is an example of an industry that has definitely improved its outlook for the future during the war period, according to Howard R. Smith, transporation unit, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, United States Department of Commerce. Writing in a recent issue of "Domestic Commerce," Mr. Smith points out that:

"In 1939 domestic carriers by water accounted for 20.6 per cent of the tonnage originated by all carriers and 38.1 per cent of the ton-miles. A breakdown of these percentages shows that intercoastal and coastwise shipping accounted for 6.3 per cent and 25.6 per cent, respectively; inland waterways, 8.3 per cent and 2.5 per cent; while 6 per cent and 10 per cent was attributable to vessels on the Great Lakes.

"Despite this substantial contribution to total transportation, however, the for hire segment of this industry was not in a healthy condition either physically or financially. In fact the Maritime Commission in 1939 found that virtually all of the freight vessels in the coastwise and intercoastal service would need to be replaced by about 1943. Package freight vessels operating on the Great Lakes system were in a similar physical condition.

"When war came all this was changed. By the latter part of 1939 shipping space throughout the world as a whole was beginning to be in much better balance with available cargo. With the actual outbreak of hostilities, not only did the total demand for vessel space—both domestic and foreign—increase markedly, but the belligerent powers withdrew some of the ships theretofore engaged in neutral, foreign trades. In addition, American shipowners sold 100 vessels to British, French, and other governments.

"The vacuum thus created was partially filled by a transfer of vessels from domestic to foreign service. As a result, the vessels remaining in the domestic trade in this country were able to find more cargo in both directions, and to partially eliminate destructive competitive practices such as rate-cutting.

"As the war in Europe gained momentum, all of these factors became cumulatively significant. A 20-year-old vessel that earned $1.25 per dead-weight ton per month in 1939 earned $2.50 per ton per month in 1940, and $3.75 in 1941. Concurrently with this rapid rise in earnings there was a similarly rapid advance in vessel prices.

"Ship operators have profited from the war in several specific ways," Mr. Smith states. "First, vessels in use by the Government and sunk by enemy action have been compensated either by the Government or through insurance, in some cases to an amount in excess of the original cost of the vessel to the owner.

"Second, vessels requisitioned for title have been valued at a high level, in some cases again in excess of original cost to the operators from whom WSA gained title.

"Third, vessels requisitioned for use by the Government have been leased at charter rates producing earnings substantially above those prevailing in 1939, although lower than those prevailing in 1942.

"Fourth, the trade-in allowances for old vessels have risen materially. For example, it was recently developed in connection with hearings on H. R. 4486 that seven vessels built in the years 1918-20, acquired by private operators after World War I at a total cost of $2,474,600, were given a trade-in allowance of $4,385,500 under section 510 of the Merchant Marine Act.

"Fifth, it has been suggested, and might come to pass, that a part of the war-built fleet will be made available to domestic operators after the war on exceedingly favorable terms.

Railroads Broke All Former Records For Handling Freight During 1944

Freight traffic moved by the railroads in 1944 amounted to approximately 740 billion ton-miles. This was 1.8 per cent above that for 1943, the previous record, and two and one-fifth times the number of ton-miles moved in 1939, according to the Assn. of American Railroads.

Railroads handled this record traffic load in 1944 with virtually the same number of locomotives and with hardly more than a nominal increase in the number of freight cars compared with 1939. There also was only a slight increase in the number of passenger cars.

Freight carloadings in 1944 totaled approximately 43,500,000 cars, or an increase of 2.5 per cent above the preceding year. The increase in the number of freight cars loaded and longer hauls per ton accounted for the increase in the ton-mile volume of freight.

Passenger traffic in 1944, too, was by far the greatest for any year in railroad history. It amounted to 96,000,000,000 passenger-miles. This was an increase of 9.3 per cent above 1943, and four and one-fifth times what it was in 1939.

Outstanding operating records established by railroads in 1944 follow:

Average load of freight per train was 1,144 tons, the highest on record. In 1943 it was 1,116 tons.

Performance per train more than doubled in 20 years, gross ton-miles per freight train hour having increased from 18,257 in 1924 to 37,548 in 1944, while net ton-miles per freight

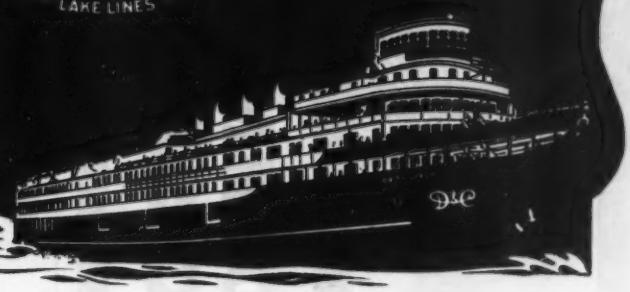
Value of Inland Waterways Held Amply Demonstrated

War services rendered by waterways in the Mississippi valley have fully repaid all the money expended for their development and for flood control, Lachlan Macleay, president, Mississippi Valley Assn. stated recently in Chicago. The system, he declared, "does not owe the taxpayer one cent."

Inland waterways in the 1943-44 season handled 299 million tons of freight, Mr. Macleay said. Had it not been for this lift and for the services rendered by motor trucks, he pointed out, this additional burden, if placed on the railroads, would have proven too much for them to handle.

In addition, Mr. Macleay said, shipyards, originally built along the waterways and on the Great Lakes, to serve the inland system, have been of the first importance in providing more than 2,000 war craft for the Navy. In the petroleum crisis, also, he pointed out, river barges carried between 30 and 40 million barrels of oil from Texas to waterway points for dispatch to the eastern seaboard. Flood control works up and down the valley, he likewise asserted, have averted the loss of millions of dollars to business interests along the waterways, even as far north as Chicago. (Slawson.)

ROUTE YOUR SHIPMENTS VIA . . .



. . . the FAST, OVERNIGHT EXPRESS SERVICE

BETWEEN

DETROIT & BUFFALO — DETROIT & CLEVELAND

FAST OVERLAND TRUCK SERVICE ALL WINTER LONG BETWEEN
DETROIT and CLEVELAND

During the short season when the ships of the D&C Lake Lines are not operating, the D&C Truck Fleet maintains daily over-the-road service between Detroit and Cleveland.

Consider the time-saving and money-saving advantages of the D&C water route and you'll see why each year more and more shippers specify D&C for their shipments between the industrial cities of Detroit, Cleveland and Buffalo.

D&C schedules are convenient. There is a big D&C steamer with tremendous freight-carrying capacity sailing each way between Detroit and Buffalo and Detroit and Cleveland every night during the navigation season. And in addition, D&C maintains a fleet of trucks in each port city area to provide quick pick-up and delivery service—to further speed your shipments.

Consider, too, that the D&C water route enjoys a favorable rate differential as compared with other types of transportation. And another advantage when you ship D&C is the fact that your shipments in each D&C terminal are handled by experienced freight men using the most modern of handling and loading equipment.

And remember . . . the dependability of D&C service has been proved in over three-quarters of a century of service on the Great Lakes.

train hour increased from 8,222 in 1924 to 17,745 in 1944.

Average daily movement of active freight cars was 52.8 miles in 1944 compared with 52 miles in 1943.

Average haul of freight was 478 miles in 1944, compared with 469 miles in 1943.

Average revenue for hauling a ton of freight one mile was 0.942c. compared with 1.116c. 20 years ago.

Average capacity of freight cars was 50.9 tons at the end of 1944, the highest on record.

Tractive power of steam locomotives averaged 53,000 lb., the highest ever recorded and an increase of 33 per cent compared with 20 years ago.

There was a noticeable leveling off in traffic in the latter months of 1944 and present indications are that the record high mark in the volume both of freight and passenger traffic has been reached.

Record Shipment

Farmers of the Lake St. John district of Quebec have sent to Montreal the largest single express shipment of Canadian cheese ever handled by the staff of the Canadian National Central Station. It weighed 29 and a half tons.

Outlook for Water Carriers

If this does develop, the gap between trade-in value and transfer values may be further narrowed, additionally benefiting the carriers.

"The net result of all of these war-induced advantages adds up to a very favorable physical and financial outlook for the immediate future for domestic carriers by water. On the basis of this outlook it appears likely that these carriers will again attain the level of achievement reached in the pre-war period as far as share of traffic is concerned.

"However, one word of caution is necessary. It has been emphasized in the preceding paragraphs that the extremely unfavorable physical and financial condition in which the domestic for-hire water carriers found themselves at the outbreak of the war was due in no small part to the liberal disposal policy of the Government at the end of the last war.

"After the cessation of hostilities in the current conflict the Government will be faced with an almost identical problem in vessel disposal. The experience of the carriers in the between-wars period should dictate a policy of conservatism based on an understanding that generosity to the carriers is not necessarily in their best long-run interest. It is in large part toward this end that pending legislation designed to formulate transfer principles for the war-expanded merchant fleet is oriented."

St. Lawrence Seaway Urged by Vandenburg

Declaring that with the postwar period there will be "freer international economy and an era of lower, rather than increasing tariffs," Senator Vandenburg of Michigan in a senatorial talk, supporting the waterway and power project which has been in controversy, emphasized that the St. Lawrence seaway will reduce commercial transportation costs and thus help business compete for world trade after the war.

The Senator mentioned Detroit as an industrial center which would be benefited by the waterway, opening the St. Lawrence to oceangoing shipping between the Great Lakes and the Atlantic.

"At the same time the chain offices solicit business for their members. When they write to us about a particular prospect, that is, his requirements, type of material, etc., we submit to him our rates and all the details about our facilities, sending a copy to the solicitor who, personally, contacts the account in order to answer any questions, and further explain our position, that is, our type of building, location, services, reliability and the like.

"It should be kept in mind that at all times our representatives are calling on new prospects, and all visits are confirmed, since if we cannot be of service at the time of the first call, when the representative follows it again, perhaps they will have merchandise for us. In any event, our salesmen make regular visits in order to keep goodwill.

"We have many inquiries by mail. We reply to it immediately and carry it to a conclusion, that is, whenever possible we secure the prospect as a customer, and, usually, because of our services we 'keep him sold.' Many of these letters of inquiry are due to the advertising which we do in some 20 to 30 newspapers and magazines, such as DandW, "Winged Foot," "American Exporter," both English and Spanish, "Advertising and Selling," "Food Field Reporter," "Drug Trade News," "Tariff," New York Telephone Directory, "Spirits," "Journal of Commerce," both New York and Chicago, "Custom House Guide," and many others. Our program is well planned for the future, and differs from the stereotype advertising done by many.

"In order to keep our prospects and customers constantly reminded that we are anxious to be of service to them and appreciate their interest, as well as in an endeavor to secure new customers and business, we send out periodically one of our blotters, as well as folders of matches at regular intervals.

"However, we do not limit our efforts merely to securing an account. We maintain the highest standard of service possible, living up to the ideals we have set. Perhaps this is the most effective type of advertising as well as the most effective way to run a profitable business and a lasting one.

"Often we recommend improvements as to packages and containers used by a client to reduce his costs for storage and handling and prevent damaged merchandise, and inform him as to the most practical methods of loading cars, routing, pool cars for distribution, etc.

"We receive inquiries from nationally-known firms who maintain large operations in the United States, call on them and study just how their merchandise is manufactured, how it comes from the production line and their present methods of storing and distribution. We then proceed to make recommendations, such as, how the cars should be loaded; form of notification to the warehouse; notification for dispatching cars so that we can be on the lookout for them, etc. We set up a program with regard to the storage of certain merchandise and the distribution of others.

"We present a complete transportation setup, stock control, warehousing and distribution program beneficial and economical to our customer. In other words, we furnish all the recommendations as to how to improve the handling of the merchandise from the time it is produced until it reaches the consumer or retailer. In fact, we have found it necessary at times to check the retailers to make certain that deliveries are being made in accord with their wishes and in compliance with the setup of the distributor."

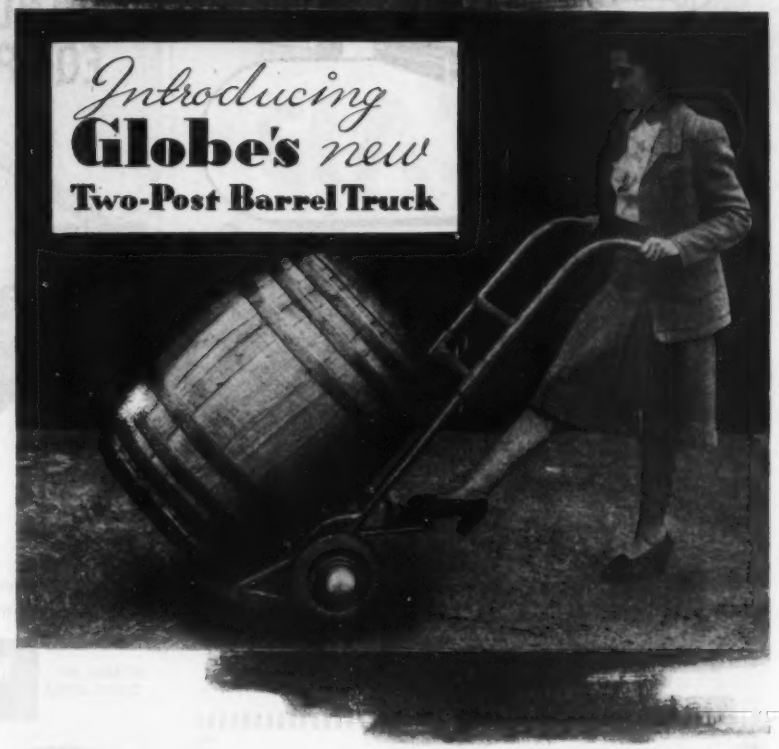
Three Major Thoughts

Public warehousemen as a rule are plain and simple men. They talk a plain and simple language. They make plain and simple statements that can be understood by prospects under nearly any circumstances. In selling they drive home three major thoughts: (1) the public warehouseman is in a position to render clients a personal, flexible service; (2) the public warehouse becomes the clients own warehouse; (3) a complete service is rendered to each client regardless of the fact that every warehouse handles numerous accounts. In other words, the warehouseman who sells successfully considers himself a contractor and adapts his facilities to the needs of prospects and customers. There is a certain amount of routine business but each account is an individual, personalized problem.

Warehousemen are sales-minded. They realize that these war years are building up sales problems for the times to come. They realize they will have to overcome resistances built up between them and prospects during this war period when it has been necessary for many warehousemen to turn away desirable accounts. The answer is that they can and will overcome these difficulties and, from all indications, will be in a position to develop broader service and new types of business.

Co-op. Deal

One of the largest deals in lumber history, involving $11,000,000, has been announced by Archie D. Walker, Minneapolis, president, Red River Lumber Co. The Red River transfers to the Fruit Growers Supply Co., Los Angeles cooperative, the entire city of Westwood, Cal., which had a prewar population of 5,064, and also its property at Westwood.



THIS new Two-Post Barrel Truck by Globe is the latest, most economical solution to your handling problems. Carefully engineered and sturdily constructed, it operates more easily than any other truck on the market.

Self-loading and unloading, it will handle all sizes of drums, barrels and both small and large tierces as well as flat boxes, yet only one man is required in its operation. To load—place the truck against the barrel, drop the chime hook and, placing a foot on the bar, pull down on the handle. Unloading is just as easy.

This truck, when set down on the scale, leaves both ends of the barrel free for easy marking. And it parks barrels flush against one another to save valuable storage space. Upright when not in use, these barrel trucks nest compactly in small space. Floor-saver wheels and perfect balance of the load assure easy rolling and prevent undue operator fatigue.

Your man on the floor will like this new method of handling barrels. You'll like it too for the savings in time, labor and floor space it offers. Write today for full details.

SAE Air Cargo Meeting

This method is reasonable because of the necessity of keeping each load separate from other loads. With the batch method, the containers could be provided with doors which close and lock, preventing tampering or theft of the articles carried.

Preceding the banquet, on the second evening of the three-day session, a social half-hour was sponsored by: American Airlines, Braniff Airways, Chicago and Southern Air Lines, Eastern Air Lines, Northwest Airlines, Pennsylvania Central Airlines, and United Air Lines.

At the banquet, which had an attendance of about 500, Wayne W. Parrish, president, American Aviation Assn., was toastmaster. The principal speaker of the evening was William B. Stout, president, Stout Research Laboratories, who stated that seaports will be of less value after the war because of aviation and that many new inland trade centers are likely to develop in all parts of the world.

William S. James, president, SAE, spoke briefly on the necessity of coordination of land and air transportation and of the need of saving minutes on the ground by means of improved handling methods so as to save hours in the air.

While no announcement was made concerning next year's plans, it is understood that the fourth annual SAE air cargo meeting will be held in Chicago probably in December, W. W. Davies, chairman and superintendent, technical research, United Airlines, indicated.

Financing Air Imports

tination with air cargo shipments financed by banks is a goal still to be achieved.

Use of Public Warehouses

Cooperation of warehouse managers, air carriers, banks and customs authorities may become necessary to cut down on time requirement incidental to import air cargo shipments at destination points.

Some speedy method needs to be devised for transmitting documents of title by the air carrier to the bank in terms of hours and minutes. Final consignee, similarly, will have to be notified promptly by the air carrier of the arrival of an air shipment and name and address of the correspondent bank with which financial settlement will have to be made.

The time lapse may be reduced by incorporating into air cargo shipping practices the services and facilities of centrally located bonded public warehouses. Rather than have an air shipment retarded at the airport while correspondent bank and final consignee are notified about a particular shipment by the air carrier, it should be advantageous to have the goods moved immediately into a public warehouse for the protection of shipper, bank consignee and airline.

Upon compliance with the terms of payment of the correspondent bank the consignee would lose very little time by going to a centrally located warehouse, presenting documents of title, arranging for payment of duties, and the delivery of his goods from abroad.

Warehouses, bonded for customs purposes, to permit official inspection of goods on premises, and centrally located, naturally would be most suitable for these services. Working arrangements between air carriers and banks could be worked out to permit centralized clearance of import air shipments through conveniently situated bonded public warehouses for the attainment of the fullest time saving between shipper and consignee.

The more we can learn about the prospect and his needs, the better off we are.

Among the tools of today's visual presentation we find not only the page-by-page charts and folios, but an extensive use of movies and slide films, photographs, miniature models, and other aids. Frequently assistance is given in the installation of equipment, in the training of operators, and in maintenance suggestions. Often representatives stay on the job to insure that results are what they should be.

Public Relations

The job of selling is not confined to products and services alone. In the broad sense we are selling confidence and good will constantly, and every member of a firm is an ambassador in the cause of better business. This takes us into the field of public relations.

The field of public relations is not necessarily the field of the press agent. An alert organization will see to it that, wherever there is a contact with the public, a good feeling is engendered.

There is no denying the fact that firms are judged to a great extent by the actions and deeds of its representatives whoever and wherever they may be. Thus the driver of a truck or moving van, for instance, will shoulder a responsibility beyond the mere delivery of his cargo. Frequently he is the only contact, and to the customer he then becomes the company. This suggests a vast field for our training and educational programs.

Need of Coordination

As we look over the many opportunities of a modern, streamlined sales program, the need for coordination of all factors in the distribution picture becomes evident. Efficiency demands that no avenue of influence be overlooked.

When the war is over we are going to step into a new world, and we in the field of distribution must take stock to see if we are prepared for it. We should decide now whether the things we have done in the past are practical in the light of future conditions, and what changes must be made. If our house is in order, we will be able to take advantage of postwar opportunities both at home and abroad. If we are not fully prepared, we will be like the manufacturer who receives a big order and is not able to handle it because he has allowed his equipment to deteriorate, because his wiring is in such condition that it will not handle the necessary load, or because he has lost his highly trained men and has no program set up to train others.

With both the need and the buying power fully apparent, the postwar opportunity for business in this country will be a fertile one indeed, and, with the influence of modern transportation and wartime contacts abroad, the possibilities of a heavy foreign trade are likewise apparent.

Distribution tomorrow will demand a broader knowledge of all the factors which go to make up this almost endless chain whose links are transportation, warehousing, handling, advertising, buying, selling, financing, etc. In spite of specialization, we must know more about more things than ever before.

Future Trade Program Outlined

"The post-war foreign trade and investment policy of the United States is inescapably bound up with the level of our imports. The dollar exchange which foreigners need in order to buy our exports must be furnished primarily through our imports.

"If the United States fails to take the initiative in providing more nearly adequate dollar exchange, there is likelihood that other nations will be forced to intensify their exchange controls, extend bilateral agreements, and develop trading blocs to the exclusion of the United States."

statute limiting the time for presenting a claim for recovery for an injury received in the course of the employment, such time begins to run from the time of the employer's failure to pay compensation for the disability.

In Commercial Standard Insurance Co. v. Riss and Co., Inc., 179 S. W. (2d) 641, Mo., the higher court held that all provisions of an insurance policy must be read together, and any ambiguity will be resolved in favor of the warehouseman.

In National Labor Relations Board v. East Texas Motor Freight Lines, 140 Fed. Rep. (2d) 404, the higher court held that where an employer or manager official clearly violates the inhibitions of the National Labor Relations Act, the fact that he went beyond and contrary to the orders of the employer can not absolve the employer from the rigors of this law.

In Arwady v. Texas & N. O. R. Co., 18 So. (2d) 339, the higher court held a shipper who sues for recovery for damage to a shipment of perishable goods must prove that the merchandise was delivered to the carrier in a sound condition, and that it was delivered to the consignee in bad condition. In other words, a consignee cannot recover damages for delivery of merchandise in spoiled condition where the consignee offered no proof that the merchandise was in good condition at the time it was delivered to the carrier.

under the same circumstances, or whether you used the same care as would have been used by other warehousemen under the same circumstances.

For these reasons it is quite impossible to anticipate with certainty the outcome of litigations of this nature. However, it is my opinion that you are not liable if you used reasonable care to make inspections of the goods to know whether they were likely to be damaged, and the extermination company is known to be reliable and responsible.

The fact that this merchandise was confiscated by a Government official does not prove that some of the merchandise could not have been salvaged to reduce the normal loss. The fact that employes of the extermination company make weekly inspection trips through your warehouse is considerably in your favor as this testimony proves that reasonable care was used by officials of this company.

lease contract. We made a verbal contract with a tenant for three years. After the first year he moved out and left the property on our hands without a tenant. Can we get damages from this tenant, as he agreed to pay us $50 monthly rental for three years. Abel Corporation.

Answer: Modern higher courts hold that all contracts relating to real estate, for more than one year, must be in writing. Otherwise the contract is void. Therefore, since your three-year contract was verbal, it is not valid and you can recover no damages from the tenant.

Federal Wage Law

Question: Please explain the difference between the Federal Wage Law and Social Security. White Bros.

Answer: The modern law of the Fair Labor Standards Act generally known as the Federal Wage Law, is well settled. If you are in the retail business you need not pay the specified wages, providing a majority of your business transactions is intrastate, or business with purchasers in your state.

However, if you transact interstate business you must pay the wages specified by this law, although only a small percentage of your business is interstate. Now, with respect to the Social Security taxation you must pay this tax on all employes whether interstate or intrastate business, providing the employes are not within the few restricted classifications as house work, farm workers, and the like. It is not important whether the employes perform only part interstate duties, if they are not within these few restricted classifications of employment.

You may be transacting entirely interstate business, and yet you need not pay the federal wages to employes who do work not at all connected with your interstate business. In other words, only employes who handle, process, or otherwise assist in the making, marketing, shipment or transportation of interstate merchandise, are affected by this wage law. However, if your truck drivers are under control of the Public Service Commission, they are without the Fair Labor Standard Act, so several higher courts have held.

Question: We made a contract with a seller to purchase certain materials for use in our warehouse. When the time came for delivering the materials the seller told us that the Government had appropriated all of these materials he had in stock and that, therefore, he could not supply us. We had to pay to another seller to get these materials and it cost us $250 more. Can we recover any from the seller who broke his contract? Allied Co.

Answer: A recent higher court case held that under these same conditions a seller whose merchandise is appropriated by the government must go

QMC Develops New Pallet For Storage and Car Loadings

A NEW pallet for unitized loading and storage has been developed by the Quartermaster Corps.

Experiments in unitized loading, conducted at the Washington Quartermaster Depot, at Cameron, Va., have resulted in the development of the new type pallet, which is single-faced instead of double, as the standard pallet previously in use.

The new pallet is constructed of three 2 in. by 4 in. stringers, which are placed flat on the 4 in. side, and to which are nailed four 1 in. by 6 in. deck boards.

It was found that the previous type of double-faced pallet utilized unnecessary car and warehouse stacking space, it is said, and also required additional labor. The new single-faced pallet is reported to be equally as strong as the double-faced, and weighs 50 per cent less. There is also a 48 per cent saving on lumber, the double-faced pallet requiring 24.5 bd. ft. while the single-faced pallet is constructed by using only 12.9 bd. ft.

The new pallet reduces the space taken up in palletized stacking by 57 per cent, it is stated, thus permitting that much more cubic space to be utilized for the additional stacking of supplies. This allows the addition of another tier of subsistence items in a unitized car-loading operation without interfering with three-pallet-high stacking in warehouses.

Oceanic Flights Predicted Soon

Speaking before the Commerce Club of Boston, A. N. Kemp, American Airles president, predicted transoceanic air transportation for commercial use immediately after the war. Saying that American, under an ATC contract, already is "flying the North Atlantic route seven round trips a day," Mr. Kemp said that the high finance connected with Boston's development of its seaport would "seem as nothing compared to the millions which will be spent in future development of the airport in Boston under our new type of air thinking which already is resulting in sound tangible achievement." Have you thought enough about Cranes?

You can prove—with the E-P Man's Help—whether Cranes can bridge a Costly Gap in your Transportation Flow

The ideal plant transportation system—the one that keeps costs down by mechanizing and speeding the flow of materials—should first of all be flexible enough to insure the handling of all loads speedily, without waste. That is why Elwell-Parker builds Electric Mobile Cranes as well as Electric Trucks of many types.

Putting Elwell-Parker Cranes on your "hook" jobs may prove the means of eliminating present wastes and closing time-consuming gaps in the flow of your materials.

The Unit illustrated has telescoping boom for high lifts and will handle loads up to 3,000 pounds. You will be agreeably surprised to find how many plant and warehouse jobs it will efficiently take over for you.

The E-P Man—your long-experienced, versatile Transportation Advisor—will gladly help you to survey the need for Cranes in your plant. It will pay you to contact him. Dial the E-P Man today.

Sweden-Great Lakes Ship Service Rumored

According to news from London, a new company has been formed to arrange for establishment of a direct steamship service between Sweden and Great Lakes ports after the war.

It was indicated that R. Nilsson, of the Rederi-a.b. Range, Westervik, and A. Palmquist, of the Thorden Lines, Stockholm, are directors in the new enterprise, formation of which in 1939 was interrupted by the outbreak of the war in Europe.

Moreover, the Swenska Amerika Mexico Linien is also reported to be reviving its plans for direct Sweden-Great Lakes service. The organization, it was reported, has two motorships available for the operations.

A motorship of 2,900 tons dead weight for use on the new line is now under construction at a south Sweden port and eventually promoters of the service hope to have eight or ten vessels running between Chicago and Sweden. Other Great Lakes ports and Montreal will also be served.

Before the war, Scandinavian steamers of relatively small tonnage carried cargo into Great Lakes ports and did substantial business in the Middle West.

Gain of 11.6% In Air Express

Air express shipments handled in combined air-rail service in the first nine months of 1944 gained 11.6 per cent over the corresponding period of 1943, the Air Express Division of Railway Express Agency reports. A total of 327,013 shipments were moved in the combination service for the nation's commercial airlines last year as compared with 292,802 shipments in 1943.

Revenue of this air-rail traffic, which originates at or is destined to a non-airport city and consequently moves part way by rail, exceeded $3,000,000.

Buys Warehouse

The warehouse building at 121-123 North Third Street, E. St. Louis, Mo., has been purchased by the John A. Ryan Moving and Storage Co. for a reported $15,000. The company, agent for the Grey Van lines, has occupied the property for the past seven years.

Granted Charter

Virginia State Corporation Commission has granted a charter to United Transfer & Storage Inc., Bristol, Va., to do a general storage and warehouse business. Maximum capital is $10,000. Clifford Skipwith is president. (Toles.)

What Does a Traffic Department Do?

merce.'" (209 Fed. 895.) "The prompt and safe carriage of goods is an obligation enforced upon carriers by the common law, and not by an act to regulate commerce." (132 ICC 745.) On the other hand, the Commission also said: "It is not a proper practice for railroad companies to adjust claims immedately upon presentation and without investigation. In all cases, claim investigation must be thorough and must disclose lawful basis for payment before the claim is adjusted."

9. Side track agreements: The arranging for private side track agreements between shipper/consignee (the owner) and the railroad. "The Commission is without jurisdiction to prescribe uniform liability clauses to be contained in leases or contracts for the construction, maintenance, and use of private tracks." (61 ICC 120.) "The Commission has no authority to order a carrier to construct and maintain a side track off its right of way without direct contribution by the shipper to the expense incident thereto." (16 ICC 587.)

10. Freight rate adjustments: The securing of adjustments in freight rates by first analyzing tariffs and making comparisons of rates, and then submitting appropriate data to the carriers. "Carriers are required to establish charges for transportation of property that are just and reasonable in conformity with the provisions of the law." (136 ICC 516.) "Shippers are entitled to reasonable rates from a point from which there has been no previous movement, so that they may procure commodities from these points whenever available, since a movement might develop which would not be possible under excessive rates." (115 ICC 339.)

The operation herein outlined may be termed routine to a partial extent, nevertheless, knowledge and proficiency are required to direct and conduct them accurately.

Transportation costs. In closing, one further illustration included. A manufacturer recently stated that he had no interest in costs of transportation because his customers paid the freight charges on shipments of his products.

When he was reminded of the fact that transportation costs begin with raw materials and follow on through the plant, involving materials handling and packing, he saw things from a different angle.

Since many materials, other than those directly needed to make a product, must be brought into the plant, cost of inbound transportation and handling plays an important part in the final cost of production.

Moreover, it was pointed out to him, even where the customers pay the freight charges, a shipper may be handicapped by being unaware that nearby competitors have more favorable freight rates and carrier services. A manufacturer can overcome this obstacle through general traffic department research efforts.

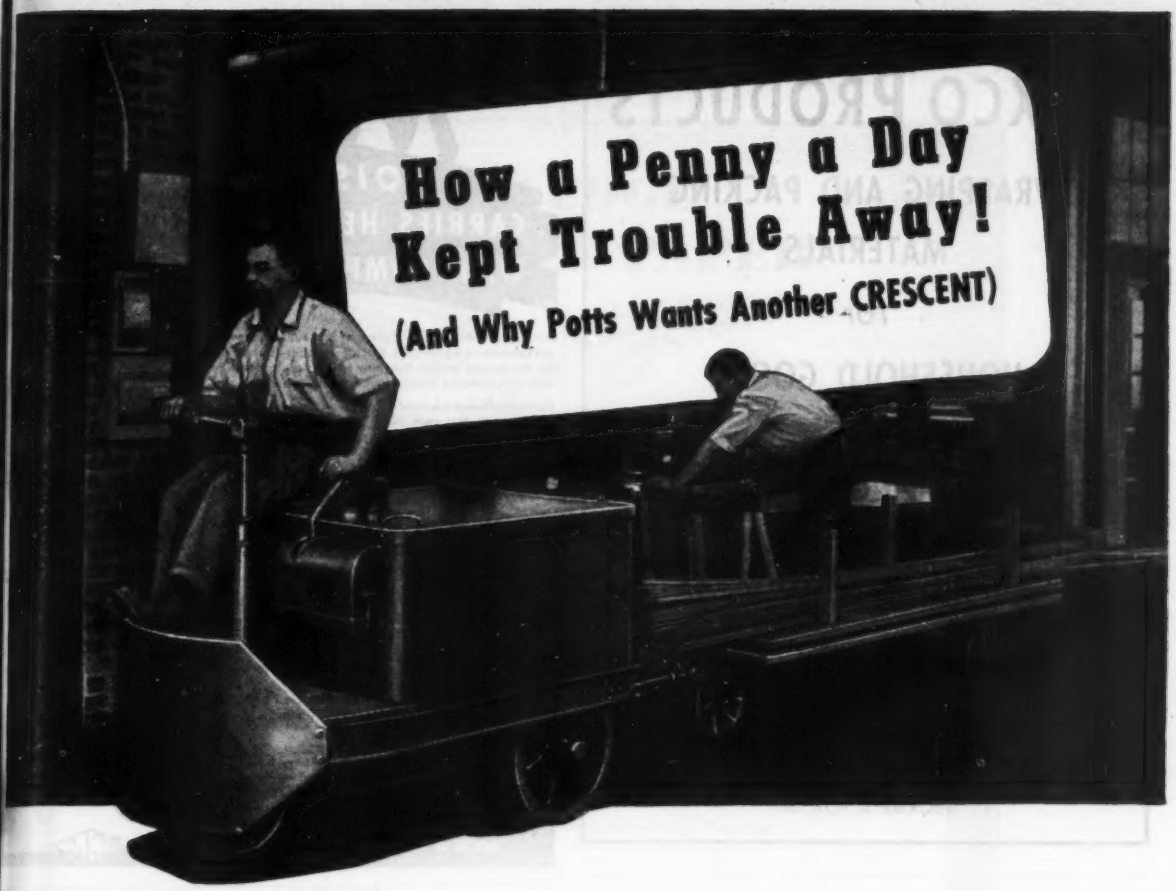
Don't assume you can't get equipment—Inquire



TWENTY-TWO YEARS AGO, the Horace T. Potts Company, Philadelphia, purchased this Crescent Electric Tractor and has used it steadily ever since. That's a lot of service and, ordinarily, it would mean a lot of tractor parts replacement. But this was a CRESCENT Electric Tractor!

Total tractor parts replacement bill for the entire twenty-two years was only $86.90 — about a penny a day!

That's a phenomenal record for any type of mobile equipment. Because of that record, Potts has just purchased a new NTW Crescent Electric Tractor. It's this kind of service that explains why customers continue to buy Crescent Electric Trucks and Tractors.

Total Accessories Costs for 22 Years

Battery and tire replacements are, of course, beyond control of the tractor manufacturer except for the initial equipment. Yet smooth Crescent performance even provided Potts with a big saving on these accessories. Average total battery and tire costs for the twenty-two years were as follows:

2 Batteries	$800.63
3 Sets of Tires	136.60
TOTAL, 22 years	937.23
Cost per year	$ 42.60

Total costs per day for tractor parts, batteries and tires averaged less than 13c.

The Modern Crescent NTW Twin Front Wheel Tractor. Designed to furnish low-cost, trouble-free, tractive power. Easy to handle. Twin steering wheel construction permits operation where congested areas and narrow aisles demand utmost flexibility. Send for bulletin.

NEW

CARRIES HEAVIER LOAD WITH COMPLETE SAFETY

American Chain Ladder Company announces a revolutionary advance in hoist hooks. Not merely built—but engineered for the utmost safety—this new hook is a protection to life, limb and load; a tremendous force in speeding jobs.

Compare these exclusive features with any hook you're using. You'll agree this new ACLC hook means safer, smoother operation—jobs completed in less time with more profit.

- ★ Patented construction provides true alignment of load and hoist;
- ★ Eliminates load slippage and hook straightening;
- ★ Load is evenly distributed between safety shoulders and lip, giving extra load carrying capacity;
- ★ Even shearing of pin would fail to dislodge load; safety shoulders and lip lock would still hold!
- ★ Scientifically designed to prevent snagging — on hatches, cornices, etc., a fault in ordinary hooks;
- ★ A single No. 2 ACLC Hoist Hook replaces 7 or 8 sizes of ordinary hooks. Handles up to 10 tons;
- ★ Despite all these exclusive advantages, the ACLC Hoist Hook costs far less than ordinary hooks.

Endless Belts from Old Inner Tubes

SMALL belts are commonly used today, some of them being made of round leather and some of rubber. Not long ago this writer was up against the problem of providing such a belt, and since he did not have any leather he attacked the problem by making use of an old automobile inner tube as indicated in the sketch.

The first belt, cut straight across, was a bit "too short," as shown. It "worked" yes, but it was unnecessarily tight. A tight belt is hard on the bearings, causing them to wear and consume more power than they should. So the next one was cut at an right." This produced a belt of correct length.

Obviously, by following this method it is possible to make excellent emergency rubber belts, of many lengths, out of a single old inner tube.—W. F. Schaphorst, M. E.

Guide for Shippers

ALL listings set in bold face type on the following pages identify public warehouses that advertise in D and W every month. Listings set in light face type identify advertisers in this directory only. Non-advertisers are listed in single lines of light face type.

When you ship by rail, the listings show you the road and station both for carload and l. c. l. shipments, and whether a siding is available.

When you ship by water, the listings show you the body of water, length of dock and other facilities available.

When you ship by truck, the listings show you the responsible motor carrier facilities operated by warehousemen in your own locality, and the motorized equipment available at all points where you may spot your stocks or distribute pool cars.

Your handling problems may be minimized by referring to the listings for available materials handling and rigging equipment.

Although every precaution has been exercised in the compilation of this directory, the publishers cannot assume responsibility for errors.

Annual Warehouse Directory

CONTROLLED DISTRIBUTION

UNDER the system of controlled distribution, which will surely be used by the far sighted manufacturer as soon as the end of the war puts him back into the consumer goods business again, the manufacturer will not even expect wholesalers and retailers to carry a stock, except for current requirements. Most of these middlemen haven't been doing so for a number of years; most of them have been small-order buyers; most of them have stocked hand-to-mouth; and more and more manufacturers have discovered they have had to carry the stock.

In the post-war era of distribution the manufacturer will warehouse his own stock, not at the factory where such a procedure is bound to be expensive, but in public merchandise warehouses spotted around the country as are the members of The Distributors' News Group. These goods will be warehoused as near to points of sale as possible and will therefore be immediately available for purchase by agencies of effective consumption which may be wholesalers, industrial users, retailers or household consumers themselves.

SAN FRANCISCO

VITAL CENTER OF PACIFIC COAST DISTRIBUTION

South End's California warehouse, or main building, at 625 Second Street, contains the general offices. Their Terminal warehouse (not shown here) is located at 660 Third Street. All South End's properties are near all railroad depots and steamship docks.

King and Company, drayage subsidiary, operates a great fleet of trucks, to meet the requirements of South End's merchandise handling problems. Models range from light delivery trucks to ten-ton jobs.

American Warehouse, 699 Second Street, which contains offices for manufacturers' representatives, also provides an inside spur track, loading platform, driveway and garage. Yard space and paved parking lot.

We will welcome your request to place our complete service at your command, and to assist you in distribution of your goods in the Pacific Coast area.

RESOLVED ☆?*!☆ ☆!

From now on I'm going to use the best warehouse with the best facilities for service IN DENVER.

I like personal consideration for my merchandise and my shipping problems. Yeah, I want insured, fireproof warehousing space . . . and, custom-bonded storage, too. What's more, I want financial responsibility. Now, I've found I can get all this PLUS better service, more accessible location . . . AND, better pool car distribution when I call on North Denver Transfer and Storage Co.

Forty-three years in business—growing in experience and courtesy every minute—they give me what I want and what I need.

Take it from me, Buddie. In Denver you better get North Denver Transfer and Storage Co. to handle your stuff in 1945. They've got plenty on the ball and you'll get a little peace o' mind when you warehouse, office or distribute through them.

Signed, sealed and delivered . . .
A. Smart Shipper

CONTROLLED DISTRIBUTION

UNDER the system of controlled distribution, which will surely be used by the far sighted manufacturer as soon as the end of the war puts him back into the consumer goods business again, the manufacturer will not even expect wholesalers and retailers to carry a stock, except for current requirements. Most of these middlemen haven't been doing so for a number of years; most of them have been small-order buyers; most of them have stocked hand-to-mouth; and more and more manufacturers have discovered they have had to carry the stock.

In the post-war era of distribution the manufacturer will warehouse his own stock, not at the factory where such a procedure is bound to be expensive, but in public merchandise warehouses spotted around the country as are the members of The Distributors' News Group. These goods will be warehoused as near to points of sale as possible and will therefore be immediately available for purchase by agencies of effective consumption which may be wholesalers, industrial users, retailers or household consumers themselves.

Quoted from an article by John H. Frederick in DISTRIBUTORS' NEWS. If you are not now receiving DISTRIBUTORS' NEWS each month, please send for sample copy without charge.

You can save and make more money. Locate your office, warehouse and/or manufacture in NORTH PIER TERMINAL

Chicago's largest and best located terminal buildings
Operating 1,500,000 sq. ft.

You can rent space for offices and storerooms combined, or light manufacturing. Or, you can rent offices for your employees and have us handle your storage and distribution on a unit basis in our general storage division. Or, if you do not have an office in Chicago, we can handle your distribution on orders from your main office or plant to apply against stock carried for your account.

You'd have LOCATION . . . on Chicago's new outer drive with quick transportation south, or north, or west. You'd be near the Chicago business district. You'd have a central location for easy, convenient distribution. You'd have FREE parking.

You'd have TRANSPORTATION . . . the finest in the world, by rail, by truck, by water. You'd have the C. & N. W. R. R. siding capacity for 1 to 120 cars, FREE switching. Also direct FREE tunnel connection to ALL railroads for LCL movement. On out of town truck shipments you'd take advantage of our Universal Station serving over 100 highway truck lines. You'd have 2000 feet of dockage on our Ogden slip near the mouth of the Chicago River where boats and barges unload at our doors.

You'd have SERVICE . . . a helpful, money saving service. You'd probably use our stevedores, our car unloaders, our checkers, our handy men, and decrease your own payroll and pay for such labor only when you'd use them.

Check these North Pier Terminal advantages. Our main building has 33 modern elevators to serve you quickly, efficiently. It has 1,250,000 square feet of floor space protected by sprinkler system (our insurance rates are as low as 18c). Space can be made available for offices, storerooms, and light manufacturing.

For MORE information, write, wire, or phone the North Pier Terminal Company.

SENG WATERWAY WAREHOUSE
SENG WATERWAY WAREHOUSE
the largest COMPLETE
WAREHOUSE and DISTRIBUTION
SERVICE IN CHICAGO

WHEN the need for a warehouse arises, one of the primary considerations is the completeness of the service available.

For years Seng has paid particular attention to the development of a plant that can offer manufacturers the type of service they, themselves, would plan to provide in a branch of their own. Today Seng is the largest complete warehousing and distributing service organization in the Chicago area.

The size of the Seng operation and the long list of Seng customers—many leaders in their fields—who have specified Seng Waterway Warehouse over the years, speak well for the way in which we have helped solve their problems of storage and distribution. We can do the same sort of job for you.

When you need a reliable warehouse service in Chicago, discuss the problem with a Seng representative—or write us for an estimate. Of course, there's no obligation whatever.

SENG SERVICE INCLUDES . . .

A million-dollar plant fully equipped.

"To-the-penny" accuracy in accounting.

730,000 square feet of storage space.

Your choice of rail, water or truck service in and out.

Under-cover rail siding, 28-car capacity.

Ideal location—only a stone's throw from Chicago's Main Post Office.

A fleet of 73 motor vehicles providing daily delivery service in Chicago and nearby suburbs.

Modern Sales and Display Offices.

Desk space with secretarial service.

Public Scale and U. S. Customs Bonded Stores.

Assistance in securing loans on warehouse receipts.

PREPARED TO SERVE THE WORLD!

- With the most modern and most unusual River—Rail—Truck Terminal and Warehouse in the United States.
- Located only ninety miles from the country's center of population. Served by six large railroads, many motor freight lines and the American Barge Line, Mississippi Valley Barge Line, Union Barge Line, Commercial Barge Lines and independent towing operations.
- Merchandising and food commodities of every description, from every part of the globe, can conveniently reach—be economically stored, and then efficiently distributed from Evansville.
- Careful, speedy and economical handling is assured by two high-speed fifty-two foot, 10-ton capacity, traveling overhead electric cranes, electric lift trucks with skid platforms and fork truck pallet system.
- Unusual building, carload facilities and motor freight terminal. Ninety thousand square feet available on one floor with no floor load limit. Fully sprinklered and protected by ADT watch service. Insurance rate only 14.7¢ per $100.00 valuation. Car spotting capacity, sixty-four cars simultaneously plus sixteen double doors to facilitate loading and unloading of motor trucks.
- Write for booklet completely describing the many unusual services available which include a unique accounting system and many special services such as stenciling re-coopering, reconditioning and automatic labeling service for canners desiring to have private brand labels affixed at the warehouse.

Located on the Hudson River, just opposite New York City

TODAY, a cog in the mighty United Nations' machine driving to victory . . . tomorrow, an essential unit in the far-flung net of American commerce.

With its modern dry-storage and manufacturing space, and the many services connected therewith, pre-empted for the purposes of war, Harborside has available over 3,000,000 cubic feet of cold-storage space. (See our advertisement in the Cold-Storage Section.)

Meanwhile, bear in mind these salient advantages of Harborside:—every modern facility for handling, storing, and distributing merchandise . . . direct connection with Pennsylvania R.R., and with all other lines, via lighterage; 32-car placement . . . 3 minutes by Hudson Tubes to lower New York—8 minutes to Holland Tunnel and trunk highways . . . custom bonded stores . . . storage-in-transit . . . low insurance . . . negotiable receipts.

EVERY ONE A LIVE TERMINAL

Equipped to render finest storage and distribution service . . .

The use of public merchandise warehouses in the economical distribution of merchandise is of great importance. Ship in carload lots to a centralized point, carry spot stocks wherever possible. Save money in transportation costs, eliminated delays in transit which occur on less-carload traffic, minimize claims.

The list of warehouses shown here are recommended for your use. BAY TERMINALS, INC. welcomes inquiries covering storage and distribution at any point in the United States and our service is free to all shippers and receivers.

Rates and other desired information cheerfully furnished.

CONTROLLED DISTRIBUTION

UNDER the system of controlled distribution, which will surely be used by the far sighted manufacturer as soon as the end of the war puts him back into the consumer goods business again, the manufacturer will not even expect wholesalers and retailers to carry a stock, except for current requirements. Most of these middlemen haven't been doing so for a number of years; most of them have been small-order buyers; most of them have stocked hand-to-mouth; and more and more manufacturers have discovered they have had to carry the stock.

In the post-war era of distribution the manufacturer will warehouse his own stock, not at the factory where such a procedure is bound to be expensive, but in public merchandise warehouses spotted around the country as are the members of The Distributors' News Group. These goods will be warehoused as near to points of sale as possible and will therefore be immediately available for purchase by agencies of effective consumption which may be wholesalers, industrial users, retailers or household consumers themselves.

Quoted from an article by John H. Frederick in DISTRIBUTORS' NEWS. If you are not now receiving DISTRIBUTORS' NEWS each month, please send for sample copy without charge.

IN THE HEART OF THE NORTHERN NEW JERSEY MARKET

AND ON THE BORDER OF THE NEW YORK MARKET

NEWARK Central Warehouse Corporation operates one of the finest buildings in the State of New Jersey.

Constructed throughout of steel and concrete, and equipped with a dry sprinkler system and automatic fire alarm system, the insurance rates are unusually low. Additional safety for merchandise is provided by personal watchman service 24 hours a day.

This property has ample private siding on the C.R.R. of N.J. Cars are unloaded under cover. There are six floors and basement, each with 50,000 square feet—a total of 350,000 square feet of space.

Let Newark Central's experienced staff supervise the distribution of your merchandise in this rich market. From these freight platforms motor freight lines provide overnight service to an area with a population of 25,000,000 persons.

And remember—merchandise stored in public warehouses in New Jersey is not subject to property tax.

Establish your warehousing headquarters here for this great market.

ERVE CENTER OF DISTRIBUTION"

LEHIGH & LACKAWANNA

1. FOUR MODERN WAREHOUSES EQUIPPED FOR TRIGGER-FAST DISTRIBUTION

Strategic location in Metropolitan New York shipping areas.

Distribution specialists for Food Commodities, Liquors, Tobacco and Tobacco Products, Oils, all types of Appliances, Fabricated Steel, heavy Industry Products, and various types of Regional Merchandise, Exports and Imports.

Total siding capacity of the Four Warehouses—134 cars, both carload and less-than carload facilities available.

Protected docks for water traffic for barges and lighters at Brooklyn.

Fifteen ton crane available for heavy lifts at Elizabeth.

NEW JERSEY

Newark—on the Lehigh Valley Railroad with reciprocal switching on the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Jersey City—on the Lackawanna Railroad.

Elizabeth—on the Pennsylvania Railroad

NEW YORK – BROOKLYN

All trunk line railroads served via Brooklyn Eastern District Terminal Railroad.

2. LOWEST FIRE INSURANCE RATES

We know of no lower fire protection insurance rate in the Metropolitan New York Area.

Buildings are of modern construction, fully protected twenty-four hours a day by watchmen and A.D.T. Service.

3. THREE BASIC STORAGE METHODS

a. General—Sugar, Cotton, Tea and Coffee, Beans.

b. Packages—Cased and packaged goods, appliances of all types which require special handling.

c. Landlord and Tenant—Leased space for self-operated warehousing, manufacturing, bottling and parts assembly.

4. U. S. CUSTOMS BONDED SPACE

Imported merchandise is stored in a space apart from other merchandise, under lock and key, supervised by a U. S. Storekeeper.

U. S. INTERNAL REVENUE BONDED SPACE

Only carefully selected, reliable warehouses are granted this privilege. Available at our Elizabeth, N. J. Warehouse.

SEA STORES WAREHOUSES

Just two warehouses in the entire New York Metropolitan Area have been granted the privilege of a Sea Store Warehouse. Our Brooklyn Warehouse is one of these. Here merchandise rests for consumption on ships scheduled for foreign ports, and for Army and Navy use on the high seas and in foreign lands.

5. SPECIAL SERVICES—TEMPERATURE CONTROL—LIQUOR ROOMS

Aging of liquors, gauging, dumping, bottling, labeling. 100,000 barrelled liquor capacity.

Inspection of cooperage, rotation of barrels, weighing for tare, tax paying and shipping—all performed by specialists.

Our bottling facility is operated by The Foreign and Domestic, Inc. No one but the U. S. Government and our bonded employees have access to these premises or records. This privilege is not sub-leased. Therefore, information about your brands or customers is kept secret.

6. ONE THROUGH RAIL RATE

For storage in transit and stop-over privileges.

From one month to three years, cars for export or import can be held in transit at our New Jersey warehouses, thereby freeing required space for production in your factories.

Stop-over cars permit part of your merchandise to be stored, with the balance immediately shipped for either export or the domestic trade.

Our stop-over or transit set-up—as it applies to you—will be analyzed, upon request, by our traffic department—at no cost or obligation.

7. MOTOR TRUCK FACILITIES

Daily service to the Metropolitan New York Area by our Lehigh Motor Fleet.

Daily pick-ups and deliveries to motor truck carriers bound for New England and Southern areas, thus eliminating delays and the damages attendant on transfers.

Licensed transport of U. S. Customs bonded goods, in addition to free merchandise.

8. DISTRIBUTION PLANNING

Analysis of the cost of a complete distribution, warehousing and transportation program—for any type of product—is always immediately available to you.

Nation-wide reciprocal arrangements are open to Southern or Western firms who want Lehigh and Lackawanna service. See your local warehouse for details. Be sure the warehouse you select prominently displays the seal of the American Warehousemen's Association.

Lehigh and Lackawanna services, 25 years old, are conducted by a personnel of sales-minded specialists; each trained in the merchandise, storage and distribution problems of your product and its marketing requirements.

9. MERCHANDISING SERVICES

New packaging recommendations for efficiency in distribution.

Re-packaging, including stamping and labeling of products.

Creative Sales Displays for your product in retail stores or in Lehigh and Lackawanna plants.

10. OFFICE AND ACCOUNTING SERVICES

Lehigh and Lackawanna's issuance of negotiable warehouse receipts, honored by all U. S. banks, frees your capital.

Accurate warehouse records, vital in dealing with public warehouses, are kept. Also a high standard of inventories, stock reports and daily notification of clients on shipments received or made. When necessary, O. S. and D. reports are sent out, C. O. D.'s returned.

11. POST-WAR IMPROVEMENTS NOW IN OPERATION

Streamlined moving of merchandise eliminates the common practice of overhandling, thus reducing delays, breakages and claims to a minimum.

For instance, "FORK LIFT TRUCKS," in conjunction with palletized loads, are moved from railroad car or truck to allocated space within the warehouse, and, upon fulfillment of an order, again to tail-board of truck or into freight car.

BUFFALO, N.Y.

UNPARALLELED WAREHOUSING AND DISTRIBUTING FACILITIES

Not on the fringe of this vital shipping and warehousing center, but at the focal point of its myriad traffic arteries.

KEYSTONE offers a strategic location—unique and unsurpassed facilities—to shippers serving the teeming markets of western Pennsylvania and New York, northern Ohio, and all the Lake and St. Lawrence River ports, including those in Canada. There are direct track connections with the Pennsylvania Railroad and the New York Central, and reciprocal switching to all other railroads entering Buffalo. Capacity, 20 cars daily, with all loading and unloading under cover. Pool car distribution. Warehouses are also served by all suburban trucking companies.

Buildings are of modern construction, and earn low insurance-rates. Adequate equipment is maintained to assure prompt, safe, and efficient handling. Exceptional facilities are provided for the storage and shipping of all kinds of goods, in any quantities. Our effective, smoothly functioning Traffic Department is at your service. Established 1903. Capital, $600,000.

Manufacturers, distributors, and merchants are invited to write for full particulars. Address your inquiry to

OUR PIERS AND WAREHOUSES ARE IN THE WAR

We know that our family of customers will bear with us in what we consider a small effort in helping to accomplish victory.

We can, however, still serve those who have pool cars for distribution in the Eastern Territory.

Complete distribution is offered in the Metropolitan Territory with trucking service at moderate rates.

Reconsignments made by rail through direct connections daily to all Trunk Line Railroads without additional cost.

A Public Warehouse Successfully Performs Every Function of a Branch House at a Fraction of Branch House Costs

FLEXIBLE DISTRIBUTION
Manufacturers requiring a most flexible handling and distribution service can profit by using the facilities we place at their disposal in the Metropolitan New York Market.

POOL CAR DISTRIBUTION
Facilities and experience make these warehouses ideal for pool car distribution. Wholesale houses, jobbers and merchants call here daily for one or more deliveries of nationally known brands on storage, and pick up these pool car consignments at the same time.

FIELD WAREHOUSING
Bankers and manufacturers have found our field warehousing plan highly acceptable. Inventories, raw materials and completed manufactures, covered by our field warehousing receipts, become desirable collateral for additional credit. Send for our field warehousing representative, who will show you how to create new working capital at minimum cost.

WAREHOUSING
Fireproof and modern structures . . . low insurance rates . . . modern material handling facilities . . . spacious elevators, loading and unloading devices . . . Guardite vacuum tank fumigation facilities . . . U. S. Customs Bonded Space . . . attractive office and display space.

CONVENIENT TO TERMINALS
Independent Warehouses are strategically located, convenient to all rail and water terminals. The flat New York freight rate applies for Erie R.R. delivery.

REACHING OUT BY TRUCK
Marvelous facilities insure flexible and rapid cartage service. Whether delivery to Jobber, Department, Chain or Drug Stores, or to any of the millions of consumers in Manhattan, Brooklyn and Bronx, a twenty-four hour delivery is systematically maintained and extended to Long Island and nearby New Jersey points within a radius of twenty-five miles.

WAREHOUSE AND LOCATION

The Midtown Warehouse, Inc., is in the Starrett Lehigh Building. Considered the most modern industrial building in New York City.

Situated on the sixth and other floors. Capacity more than 250,000 square feet. 85,000 square feet U. S. Bonded Warehouse.

VENTILATING, HEATING, ETC.

Warehouse is light, airy and well ventilated. Heated in the winter by modern thermoleer units which are thermostatically controlled, allowing us to maintain any desired temperature with these instruments.

WAREHOUSE ACCESSIBLE

By freight or truck elevators. Elevator capacity more than 30,000 lbs. Merchandise can be loaded or unloaded on street platforms or in truck pits right outside of our warehouse doors inside the building. This eliminates the hazards of street loading.

LOW INSURANCE

Compare with others. We are absolutely fireproof.

RAILROAD SIDINGS

Building is known as less carload station on Lehigh Valley tracks. This permits us to handle either carload or less carload freight without cost to the storer.

FREE CALL AND DELIVERY SERVICE

By all R. R., coastwise S. S. carloading Co.'s and long distance Truck Operators.

DEEP SEA AND COASTWISE PIERS

We believe we are ideally located for both. This should result in a low cost of cartage to or from this particular point.

INSPECTION INVITED

We respectfully invite you to inspect the premises at any time, at your convenience so that you may see for yourself the modern warehouse we are operating.

We call attention to our ultra-modern warehouse at 29-39 Pavonia Ave., Jersey City, N. J. Situated on the Erie R.R. and Hudson River. Send for further details of this warehouse—The Mid-Hudson.

"MANHATTAN-PAC"

Specializing in Air Cargo Packing

SECTION VIEW OF MEDICINE PACKED FOR AIR SHIPMENT

FOR AIR TRANSPORTATION

BURLAP WRAPPED

FOR AIR AND RAIL EXPRESS

The new era of air cargo transportation is actually here . . . bringing with it a new science of packaging, new methods of merchandising and distribution, new packing materials — and even new words.

Already the word "MANHATTAN-PAC" has become the hallmark for perfect air cargo packing. And rightly so, for it is the natural development of 62 years' experience in packing for shipment every type of merchandise (to borrow John Masefield's famous poem*) from "ivories, sandalwood and sweet white wine" to "cheap tin trays".

Looking ahead, and recognizing the need, The Manhattan Storage & Warehouse Co. inaugurated a special division for Air Cargo Packing and Distribution. All of its facilities, experience and personnel are at your disposal to provide your particular air cargo shipment with scientifically correct packaging to insure lightness, strength and weather resistance.

We invite your inquiries on any of your air cargo packing problems.

AIR CARGO PACKING AND DISTRIBUTION DIVISION

7th AVENUE and 52nd STREET, NEW YORK 19, N. Y. — CIRCLE 7-1700

FOR AIROBUTION

There are very few articles that cannot be shipped by air. Limitations are exercised on goods of unusual weight or bulk. Where possible, it is advisable to divide oversize shipments into a number of smaller packages, to meet size specifications which vary with certain airlines.

Air express rates are graduated according to distance. Connecting rail service for off-airline points is provided with quick, efficient handling.

Packing is stressed by the Railway Express Agency, Air Express Division, Tariff No. 7 as follows—"All property shall be so prepared or packed as to insure safe transportation with ordinary care and handling" . . . and the "Express Company shall not be liable for loss, damage or delay caused by improper or insufficient packing or securing". When your merchandise is packed by The Manhattan Storage & Warehouse Co. you can be assured of the best packing at minimum cost.

Ideally Located for Storage in Transit . . .

Direct Rail Connections with North, East, South, West Metropolitan Districts

GREAT NORTHERN WAREHOUSES

SYRACUSE, N. Y.

One of America's Great Warehouses

Rear of Great Northern Warehouses showing private sidings on NYC & D L & W railroads.

Typical storage floor showing orderly arrangement and capacity for volume storage.

Used by many of the country's largest national manufacturers GREAT NORTHERN WAREHOUSES afford unusual advantages for storing large consignments of MERCHANDISE IN TRANSIT. Here's why:

1—located in the center of upstate New York's richest distributing area

2—in direct line with North, East, South and West metropolitan areas

3—private sidings on the MAIN LINE of the NEW YORK CENTRAL and on branch lines of the D. L. & W.

4—direct rail connections with the NEW YORK STATE BARGE CANAL TERMINAL, affording water transport to the Great Lakes and the Atlantic Ocean

5—modern fireproof construction, sprinklered, lowest insurance rates, steam heated

6—office and display space available

7—space leases for private storage

8—public storage on a package basis

Tell us about your problems. We'll gladly submit recommendations and rates at no cost or obligation to you.

. . and war WILL end—

Thru the difficult days of war, we've been setting ourselves the task of meeting every demand upon our facilities with the same zeal for service that has made The Cotter City View Storage Co. a leader.

Though specializing in rubber accounts, we've kept our household goods and merchandise departments in top form—aiding personnel and business moving necessitated by the war emergency, handling needed merchandise in our vitally important production area.

But the war WILL end—and we've planned for greater service than ever for our clients and customers-to-be. Our operations for the rubber industry will be on an even greater scale than at present. Our service in and out of Akron will be improved and expanded.

The dawn of Victory will find Cotter City View Storage Co. ready.

May we help you?

LEDERER TERMINALS

.....have something in store for you..!

Four modern Cleveland terminals are equipped to meet the requirements of our clients—the Who's Who of National Distributors. Ship by Water, Rail or Truck, all facilities are at your disposal at convenient locations.

Our newest terminal at the Foot of East 9th Street has most modern motorized equipment for fast and economical freight handling. It is Cleveland's only lakefront warehouse with direct rail connections. Ships may tie up at its 1000 feet of dockage without passing bridges or other obstructions requiring tugs.

From the handling of fragile merchandise, case at a time, to the hoist of giant electric gantry dock cranes. From stowing of ordinary freight to storing of susceptible commodities under humidity control. From carton to cargo,—all is with the same degree of care and thought that has made the Lederer trained organization outstanding in the field of stevedoring and warehousing.

That's why—LEDERER TERMINAL SERVICE BUILDS BETTER BUSINESS for YOU.

You Can't Do Better Than Use LINCOLN Facilities

LINCOLN Service and facilities embrace every factor involved in storing, warehousing, shipping and moving merchandise or household goods coming into or leaving Cleveland.

The facilities include two modern, fireproof warehouses located in the heart of Cleveland and the handling of carload shipments from the private Lincoln siding on the New York Central Belt Line connecting with all railroads entering Cleveland. LCL shipments to Pennsylvania, Euclid Avenue Station, are serviced quickly through Lincoln's Euclid Avenue Warehouse.

Lincoln men and methods assure you quick, safe, reliable service at an economical cost. Use Lincoln when you next ship to and from Cleveland whether it's a matter of merchandise or household goods. Then, with you, also, it will be Lincoln once—Lincoln always.

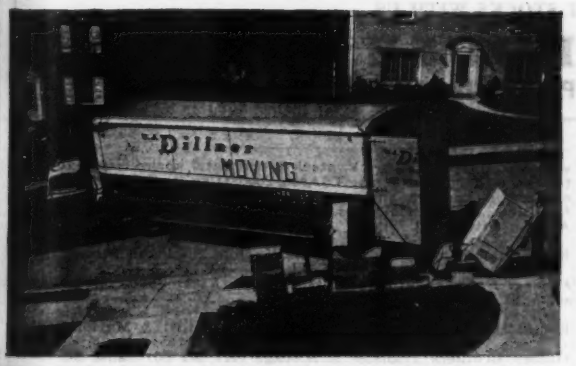
Dillner

Moving • Storage • Heavy Hauling

The Dillner headquarters in Dormont is the newest and most modern storage in Western Pennsylvania.



Our 45 trucks are constantly on the move out of Pittsburgh—to Detroit, St. Louis, San Francisco, New York, Washington, Baltimore. Fast and efficient service obtained through expert dispatching and routing.

This large pickling tank is an example of the massive equipment of every type that Dillner handles.

it's the Dillner way of doing things

"Dillner of Pittsburgh" is a synonym for "Efficient Service at Low Cost". Experience, equipment and foresight have made it possible for our organization to handle all materials — from delicate precision instruments to steam turbines . . . to transfer them a block or long distances.

Dillner has special crews to handle household and office furnishings, for transferring heavy machinery, for rigging heavy machinery. Each crew has been carefully trained in handling materials in his special field . . . all under the direction of Albert G. Dillner, John H. Dillner and William J. Dillner.

Dillner will gladly present estimates on any of your operations requiring moving, storage or heavy hauling.

TO business firms desirous of favoring their customers with an improved distribution service:

You want your goods handled carefully, stored properly and kept in first-class saleable condition.

You want your customers treated courteously and intelligently.

You want to feel that your contact with your customers through us is as satisfactory as though your best contact man were here.

You want your customers to receive your merchandise from us with the feeling that they will again be pleased to buy your products.

This is the service we constantly endeavor to give our customers—an outstanding quality of Service to our customers—and our understanding of Service is Security, Efficiency, Responsibility, Enthusiasm, Care of Merchandise and our interest in your business.

Established in 1894, our warehouses have been kept modern in every way. Ample siding, long, efficient platform for quick loading and unloading under shelter.

Equipped with sprinkler systems, located near the wholesale and retail districts, direct track connections with DL&W and D&H railroads. 14 trucks, 8 tractors, 10 semi-trailers.

Dry storage for merchandise; storage in transit; trucking, pool car service; rental space for offices, show rooms and manufacturing. Low insurance rates. Consign CL shipments DL&W—D&H; LCL via any RR. Free switching except CNJ.

CONTROLLED DISTRIBUTION

UNDER the system of controlled distribution, which will surely be used by the far sighted manufacturer as soon as the end of the war puts him back into the consumer goods business again, the manufacturer will not even expect wholesalers and retailers to carry a stock, except for current requirements. Most of these middlemen haven't been doing so for a number of years; most of them have been small-order buyers; most of them have stocked hand-to-mouth; and more and more manufacturers have discovered they have had to carry the stock.

In the post-war era of distribution the manufacturer will warehouse his own stock, not at the factory where such a procedure is bound to be expensive, but in public merchandise warehouses spotted around the country as are the members of The Distributors' News Group. These goods will be warehoused as near to points of sale as possible and will therefore be immediately available for purchase by agencies of effective consumption which may be wholesalers, industrial users, retailers or household consumers themselves.

DALLAS

THE DISTRIBUTION CENTER OF THE RICH SOUTHWEST!

Complete Warehouse Service

The facilities of this strictly modern merchandise warehouse offer you all the advantages of having your own branch house in this trade territory with none of the disadvantages, and at only a fraction of the cost of operating a branch.

We will receive your merchandise in carload or less-than-carload lots . . . store it for you in our fireproof, sprinkler equipped building . . . and then distribute your goods as you wish. We will receive orders from your home office, your salesman or your customers . . . mark and ship your goods on the day the order is received . . . using your name as shipper to preserve your identity with your customers. If you wish, we will make "store door delivery" within the city or suburbs . . . and provide for store door delivery in any towns in the territory. Your representatives may arrange to use our offices for receiving mail and telephone calls.

We will report all shipments or deliveries of your merchandise as they are made daily, and at the end of each month send you a stock report that will balance. If you like, you may furnish us a list of your customers whose requisitions are to be honored direct, and we can save additional time in filling orders.

We are doing these things every day for many of the country's largest manufacturers and national accounts. We are bonded and issue negotiable receipts upon request. Your request for additional information will be welcomed.

Maintaining facilities to perform prompt, efficient service at all times. Field Warehousing available at convenient points throughout this region.

Approximately ONE BILLION DOLLARS has been invested in this strategic area in U. S. Army and Navy Supply Depot's—all located within 10 miles of the center of Ogden—and along with kindred installations, employing upwards to 50,000 full time workers. With accelerated mining operations and manufacturing development anticipated for the near future, the Ogden area is destined, by conservative estimate, to become the center of more than 150,000 population. This information should be of vital interest to National distributors who are carrying, or plan to carry stocks, in Ogden.

We maintain an efficient Brokerage Organization in connection with our storage operations, and solicit the accounts of reliable concerns anywhere.

DEPENDABLE SERVICE WITH SECURITY

We receive annually millions of dollars worth of merchandise from nationally known manufacturers for delivery in Pacific, also Central States and intermediate region.

This company's experience has been more than one-third of a century without a loss to any customer. It is financially responsible and complies with bonded requirements. The organization's personnel includes some who have been active in directing the business from the time of incorporation in 1906.

Employees are under bond, and reliable; also trained to be efficient and conscious of the importance of strict attention to detailed instructions.

Storing spot stocks in a public warehouse is not only a selling stimulator for the trade already established, but economically safer as an experimental venture in new territory than leasing or purchasing a building, because sales-managers are not hampered by problems of operation and maintenance.

Some very large shippers have warehoused and distributed commodities here for over twenty years, due to our competent handling. Of course, smaller accounts are welcome too.

Traffic managers and other executives are cordially invited to communicate with us.

MILWAUKEE'S FOREMOST WAREHOUSING AND DISTRIBUTION CENTER

Rail, Marine & Motor Truck Terminals

Strategically located for city-wide distribution within a few minutes of the heart of Milwaukee's wholesale and jobbing districts. Unexcelled transportation facilities, speeding up reshipments to adjacent key markets.

The only entirely separate office building with private offices and display rooms for manufacturers' agents, jobbers, brokers, etc.; with automatic telephone service to warehouses. Western Union telegraph office and cafeteria.

At the right is seen one of the Atlas many licensed warehouses which are equipped with every facility for the proper handling and safe preservation of goods. — Frequent switching service daily from CMSTP&PRy main line on premises. — Low Content insurance rates.

The only dock in Milwaukee located on joint tracks C&NWRy and CMSTP&PRy (Soo Line operates in connection), with direct switching service by both carriers. Also adjacent to Grand Trunk, Pennsylvania and Pere Marquette carferry docks. — Ideal location near harbor entrance for waterborne commerce moving via St. Lawrence and Great Lakes waterways.

Milwaukee's largest motor freight terminals, the hub of Atlas distribution, are owned by Atlas and operated by over fifteen motor truck lines. Direct overnight delivery service to Wisconsin and Upper Michigan and connections with numerous lines to points beyond.

BECAUSE OF THE PAPER SHORTAGE and the necessity of reducing the weight of our paper stock, the Cold Storage section in this issue has not been printed on blue stock for the first time in many years.

However, all of the information with respect to cold storage warehousing published in previous years has been included in the present issue. The only change has been in the weight and color of the paper used.

Cold Storage Facilities Considered Adequate

Cold storage facilities in Western New York have proved adequate for perishable fall food crops. Late summer and early fall fears of producers and warehousemen that large summer stock of Government supplies with which the warehouses were bulging, would not be moved in time for storage of the local crops, were not realized.

Speaking of this George D. Liles, president, New York State Assn. of Refrigerated Warehouses, said "the WFA did a wonderful job in moving its summer supplies from the warehouses.

"I haven't heard of the least distress because of lack of warehouse space. The warehouses are doing a magnificent job of handling them.

"There was a good deal of worry in the fall about removal of the Government supplies that taxed the warehouses to capacity, but, with the removals there has been enough space for the perishable things that really require refrigeration, so that none have been wasted." (Toles.)

Time of Foods Held in Cold Storage Said to Average Less Than 6 Months

Storage of foods in refrigerated warehouses averages less than six months, Carl A. Swanson, president, Jerpe Commission Co., widely known authority in the perishable foods trade, stated in a radio program last month as guest speaker on the Union Pacific Railroad hour "Your America," broadcast from Omaha, Neb.

"A cold storage warehouse is little more than a huge, mechanical refrigerator," Mr. Swanson said. "It has different compartments where different temperatures are maintained to preserve different kinds of foods, but like the refrigerator in your home its main job is to keep foods fresh and edible by keeping them cool or cold. The cold storage plant is, in effect, a community ice-box.

"Now let's see what cold storage means to the country as a whole. It is a means of balancing our food supply, offsetting the effects of the seasons. Without cold storage there would be tremendous surplus of foods at certain times, selling at giveaway prices or going to waste. Then at other times there would be acute shortages and high prices. Cold storage spreads the supply throughout the year, to the advantage of both the farmer and the consumer, as well as wholesalers and dealers.

"And, of course, there is a great advantage to the health of the nation. Cold storage preserves not only the fine quality but also the wholesomeness of fresh foods, permitting healthy eating all the year through. And let me emphasize again that refrigerated foods are good foods. Only the cream of the crop is put away for future use and it is carefully inspected and graded before going into the cold storage warehouse.

"Just as the food supply in cold storage has helped us in many emergencies, such as floods and famines, so are the refrigerated warehouses vital in the present war. Not only are we storing great quantities of food supplies for army, navy and lend-lease, but many cold storage plants are engaged in preparing frozen foods for shipment overseas.

"Some people have the mistaken idea that foods are held in cold storage for years. As a matter of fact, they are held on the average less than six months. State laws set time limits beyond which foods may not be held in storage.

"In the postwar world, and with the increased use of deep-freeze cabinets in the home, the cold storage industry is ready to assume new importance to the American family, by storing and distributing fresh-frozen foods for every day consumption.

"And so we find cold storage a cornerstone in our civilization, a means by which foods may be kept fresh and appetizing and healthful throughout the year, and by which prices are stabilized and produce made available

Work Done By Cold Storage Industry A 'Notable Achievement,' O'Hara Says

In a letter addressed to members of the National Assn. of Refrigerated Warehouses at the approach of the holiday season, Frank A. O'Hara, president, expressed his appreciation to the membership for its support and for its performance during the past year in furthering the war program.

"It has indeed been a strenuous year for all of us," Mr. O'Hara wrote, "not only in handling and preserving the unprecedented tonnages of perishable foods tendered for storage, but in planning each day to do an even better job the next. We have, however, been richly rewarded for every effort made, in the knowledge that our industry has established an exceptionally outstanding record of performance and a greater and more effective one each year since Pearl Harbor.

"We can take pride in this notable achievement and in the satisfaction of knowing that our work as individuals and as an organized industry has been acknowledged by many representatives of government and our commercial patrons as helpful to them in their operations and effective work in the public interest.

"But there is much more to be done before an enduring peace can be restored to this troubled world of today. There are many battles still to be won by our armed forces and those of our allies. All of us on the home front, in this industry and in others, must therefore continue without interruption our utmost effort to bring an end to this world conflict and to establish permanent peace among all nations thereafter. There must be no pause or stoppage in that effort and my deepest wish is that every individual associated with your company will continue to retain the health, strength and spirit necessary to assist in accomplishing these happy results as quickly as possible."

Minimum Producer Price of 27c. Doz. Set for Candled Eggs in '45 by WFA

A minimum 1945 producer price of 27c. per dozen for candled eggs has been announced by Marvin Jones, War Food Administrator. This price will be supported by purchases from dealers upon certification that they in turn have paid no less than the support price to producers, the announcement stated.

In areas where marketing facilities for purchasing candled eggs from producers cannot be made available, a minimum producer price of 24c. a dozen was announced. In these areas the WFA will stand ready to purchase eggs from farmers at 24c. per dozen straight-run. Purchasing agents will be designated in all areas prior to the beginning of heavy egg production. It is hoped, however, WFA officials said, that facilities for candling can be provided in all areas.

To avoid storage and transportation difficulties encountered in 1944 due to the poor condition of shipping cases and packing material, purchases by the WFA in 1945 will be on the basis of good used cases (complete with tops) or in new fiber cases.

Purchases of dried and frozen eggs will be correlated with the purchases of shell eggs for price support purposes. In this way all sections of the country can be covered.

The WFA, it is said, will have need for substantial quantities of high grade eggs to meet export requirements. The Armed Forces also will be purchasing eggs of a high quality. Altogether, the domestic demand for graded eggs, and the demand for governmental agencies can be expected to maintain the usual grade differentials in price.

Warehouse Licensing

Flat city license tax of $100 per storage warehouse and the removal of the present $400 license fee on concerns that own four or more warehouses has been recommended to the City Council of Richmond, Va., in an effort to make the city warehouse license more equitable. (Toles.)

Self-Service Stores for Frozen Food Being Studied By Refrigeration Corp.

The Refrigeration Corp. of America, Columbus, O., is considering the possibility of installing self-service equipment for frozen vegetables, fruits, and meats in retail food stores throughout the country, including Columbus, according to John Bess, president, who said recently that arrangements for establishment of self-service frozen food stores have already been completed in some cities, but the opening of the outlets will depend on the availability of needed construction materials.

Frozen food self-service equipment will operate similarly to the Automat, he said, with the frozen foods on display in much the same way that prepared foods are shown in the Automat eating places. "Wares of these places of business will be displayed in windowed cases, constructed so that the contents may easily be seen by the customer," he explained. According to the plans, locker systems with space available for private rental to the customer will be operated in connection with the self-service stores.

"Increasing demand for frozen foods during the last few years indicates that a great expansion may be expected in central frozen food locker systems, both in connection with the self-service idea and separately, after the war," predicted George J. McLeer, a representative of the Refrigeration Corp.

McLeer said it was unlikely that the self-service stores for frozen foods will be adopted to any great extent in rural communities, although the locker idea has grown rapidly there. He said the basic advantage of frozen foods, whether in self-service stores or locker systems, were more nutritious foods at lower prices, and elimination of the dealer's loss from perishables. Poll Shows Postwar SA Trade 'Favorable'

A survey made by the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York reveals that postwar trade prospects between the U. S. and Latin America are "decidedly favorable."

Several "extreme uncertainties," rooting generally in the transition to peacetime economy, were disclosed however at the same time.

According to the poll, which was made among bankers and business men in the Latin nations (now holding gold and foreign exchange in excess of $3,000,000,000), possible barriers to the trade outlook would be international relations, currency stabilization, question of whether peace will endure, tariff or other trade restraining devices, and postwar attitudes toward free enterprize.

International Commercial-Policy Group Is Called Solution of Trade Barriers

New York State's Chamber of Commerce, as one of the "pivotal points" in a recently outlined comprehensive program for resumption of international trade after the war, advises that an international commercial-policy organization be established as part of a world-wide movement to eliminate such "trade barriers" as high tariff and foreign exchange control.

In a story carried in The New York Times, it was stated that the chamber termed the U. S. the only country capable of taking the lead in the crusade for free world trade, warning that failure to remove governmental practices used to limit trade will strengthen the tendency for rigid state control to take the place of free enterprize in international commercial dealings.

Without this leadership, the Times went on to report from a "statement of principles embodied in the program," there is a very real danger that the world will become divided into trading blocs, "which could only result in economic conflict and repetition of the frustrations of the Thirties."

U. S. Population Up 6 Million

The population of the United States on July 1, including service men and women overseas, was estimated by the Bureau of the Census in December to have been 138,100,874, a rise of 6,400,000 since the 1940 census.

The bureau said that the increase was almost three-fourths as great as the addition to the population in the 10 full years between 1930 and 1940. It attributed the higher rate of increase since the last census to the rise in the excess of births over deaths and the rise in the excess of immigration over emigration

India Good Market, Boulton Declares

Reiterating the fact that a "battle of distribution, rather than one of production" faces the U. S. in the export field as well as in its domestic economy, Col. C. Warren Boulton, managing director, Machine Tools (India) Ltd., declared at a New York's Export Managers Club meeting that exporters who get into the Indian market first with "cheap but good articles" will glean the postwar benefits of that market.

Asia will develop as an export market faster than Europe can fall back into its normal stride of trading, Col. Boulton said, but he added that plans for increased Far Eastern trade by American exporters will have to include a real grasping of the facts of "low standards of living" and "increased industrialization."

Says Local Interests Must Lead In Reconversion

Local spirit and local pride must be depended upon to start construction projects and help pave the way for the great after-victory job of demobilization and reconversion, Eric A. Johnston, president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, declares in the annual directory issue of The Constructor, official publication of The Associated General Contractors of America, the national organization of leading general construction firms.

"States and municipalities should assume every responsibility they can assume," he says, "but they will be helped in putting their shoulders to the reconversion wheel, if Congress will declare a reasonably clear line of demarcation between public works which will receive federal aid, such as highways and public works which will not such as waterworks and schools."

The states and municipalities, he believes, are in a better position than in many years to resume the practice of financing their own public works. Their debts have been reduced, their current tax collections are at peak levels, and their relief responsibilities at a minimum.

Some 37 states have set up reserves which exceed $2,000,000,000, and municipalities in 21 states now have specific authority to set up reserves and they have done so in substantial amounts, he explains. The credit position of municipalities, especially as to short term obligations, is excellent, he says, and in many instances they can now borrow on terms as favorable or more so than the federal government.

Mr. Johnston contends that Congress might very well set up a suitable agency for measuring and evaluating the combined benefits and costs of proposed expenditures for public works.

"Such an agency," he declares, "could see to it that expenditures for needed federal improvements were scheduled over a period of years with a view to insuring as much stability within the construction segment of our economy as is practicable without sacrificing urgent needs for public improvements. It could clear information with the 48 states and thus provide leadership in establishing construction activity.

"Important as public works are for the construction industry, private work is much more important," he continues, "and we must look to private initiative to furnish the largest part of employment. In an active economy, private construction is two-thirds of the total construction volume.

"All construction work should be planned as far in advance as practicable. This is particularly urgent in getting ready for a rapid and orderly shift from a wartime to a peacetime economy."
